Donald Trump Paid Zero Taxes? Good for Him

By Bob Meishra, Issues & Insights - September 26, 2020

So the New York Times asserts that Donald Trump paid zero taxes for many years.

But won't release the information on which it's basing this dynamic claim less than six weeks before an election - and right on cue for the first televised debate.

Uh huh, Shocking charges made against The Donald based on thinly sourced or withheld information? Where have we heard that one before?

Naturally, President Trump and his legal team deny the allegation. But that doesn't matter.

Because even if the account is true, the only appropriate response is: good for him, on several counts.

Note the headline: "Long-Concocted Revels Show Trump's Chronic Losses and Years of Tax Avoidance."

Let's parse that formulation, shall we?

"Long-Concocted." Another phrase for that: "private." The Gray Lady says it won't release the backup for its reporting to protect sources "who have taken enormous personal risks to help inform the public."

"Enormous personal risks" such as either breaking the law or violating a fiduciary obligation to The Donald. Either way, it's despicable behavior in which the Times is complicit.

By the way, one of the key "findings" - read, "leaks" of stolen information - is the story is that a tax refund is under audit. Which happens to be the reason the president has advanced for not releasing his taxes, to much derision and skepticism.

"Chronic Losses." Anyone remember what business the Trump Organization is in? Oh, yeah: real estate. The entire name of that game is generating losses. (Don't believe it? Google "real estate generating losses." You'll only get 122 million results in less than half a second.)

It, with worldwide real-estate holdings and branded properties, the president's company can't generate paper losses for tax purposes, his message to his entire legal and accounting team should be, in true "Apprentice" style, "You're fired."

And even if Mr. Trump's losses were mostly due to bad decisions, that doesn't mean he should pay taxes on those losses.

Which brings us to "Tax Avoidance." Ah ha: the rub of the story. Notice the paper does not allege "tax evasion."

Other than the questionable tax refund, the Times appears to be alleging that, in addition to running his business badly, The Donald has apparently found legal, if potentially questionable, ways to capitalize on the law.

The real problem is not the president's actions, but rather, as usual, stupid government. In this case, government taxing the wrong people for the wrong thing in the wrong way.

As this commentator has noted previously in responding to annual expressions of indignation that some big-name corporation paid zero taxes, the true scandal is that Congress has apparently made it more profitable for Mr. Trump to invest in generating losses than in productive businesses (although his initiatives doubtfully employ thousands around the world).

If Congress wanted money-losing businesses - whether truly or artificially - to pay taxes, it shouldn't be taxing income. Since, by definition, companies with no income will not pay income taxes. (Duh.)

But then taxing income, of whatever kind, is colossal stupidity in the first place. Generating income, as opposed to losses, means someone has put either human or financial capital to work, often to the benefit of others as well as himself. Society is punishing its most industrious, conscientious and selfless citizens, often to reward people who are none of the above.

Payroll taxes? Even more imbecilic. On top of taxing people for working, we're taxing companies for hiring them?

Not to mention that taxing income gives the Internal Revenue Service enormous power to intrude in the lives of everyday Americans as well as the rich and famous - and access to the kind of personal information being splashed all over the pages of the nation's most famous journalistic enterprise to shame the president.

The truth is that by hook or by crook, and who cares which, Mr. Trump may just considering the source, that's an essential phrase! have arrived at the correct level of income taxation for corporations and individuals alike: zero.

And if that's the case, again, good for him. And maybe us.

Not only because the president has fulfilled his duty to his business and its stakeholders to use the code to full advantage. But also because it creates the opportunity to have a "conversation," so the Democrats' wilderness would hear it, about the real issues behind Mr. Trump's taxes - and the nation's as well.

By all means, let's discuss whether our genetically stupid government should persist with a wretchedly destructive, complex and opaque tax regime that creates the incentive to conceal wealth instead of create it. That penalizes hard work and risk-taking, rather than focusing on consumption.

That by one estimate runs up compliance costs of $1 trillion a year, as it so tightens the citizenry that a majority uses tax preparation services to pay a simple bill for government services.

And that gives the government the power to poke into and wreck the lives of the people it is supposed to serve.

When is the New York Times going to report that story and shame the out-of-touch elitists who perpetrate this abomination? Don't hold your breath.

Op-Ed: Leftists Want Our President Dismissed, Defeated, or Dead!

By Don Boys, Ph.D. - September 23, 2020

The Associated Press on Sunday reported that law enforcement officials had arrested an unidentified lady who walked into the White House. There is no antidote for racism. It is my opinion that we will see more attacks on the President in the following weeks. The enemies of freedom want Trump out whether he is dismissed, defeated, or dead.

I don't want to put these words in print, but I must. I believe the far left has been softening up America to eliminate the President of the United States and accomplish a coup d'etat by Socialists and Communists. (A Communist has a gun; the Socialist doesn't, but he will get one.) Others, less radical, will be enticed to destroy this administration.

As a student of History and a keen observer as well as an active political person, I have never seen such hatred expressed for a politician and his policies. I don't believe every vitriolously vocal person against Trump wishes him dead, but historians will identify each of them with the irresponsible heters who have connected the dots and got the message: kill Trump.

It was only one month after President Trump was inaugurated that a group of young children in Chicago were filmed beating and tearing apart a President Trump pinata, as leftist bullies cheered them on. Even mentally dull people have understood the definite, desired, and demanded message: if you have a racist cause, you don't have to respect laws or fear accountability. Furthermore, when a racist hater is caught breaking the law, he or she understands to immediately yell "racism" and whine about an obscure but favorite unnamed uncle who was mistreated as a slave.

Conspirators and the weak of mind (often the same people) have noticed that leaders are not arrested and put in jail, monsters are treated as heroes, thieves are not arrested if they steal less than $700, and thousands of felons have been released from prison to continue their felonious actions. Moreover, they are aware of celebrities (often actresses whose basic talent is telling their breasts hang out or racist and sexist rashes who have had a hit rap song sporting vile, vulgar, and violent messages) who have suggested the President should be removed, even killed.

No dog whistle is needed.

Everyone knows that minorities can live a life of crime, and when caught, they can roil and snarl; and if police shoot them, they will be defended by protesters as heroes. We have been told that looting is not looting since the looters deserve it because (maybe) their monsters were slaves. The protesters (many of them white) have discovered the art of eating without working by making a profession out of protesting. Shockingly, police officers are harassed and fired and, at times, jailed for doing their job resulting in whole departments resigning. Who can blame them?

Recent films such as Why Don't We Murder More White People are aimed at taxpayers' expense at the San Francisco museum for a month, and people wonder why so many Blacks attack Whites for no reason. When cities pay millions of dollars to criminals and their families for alleged illegal police action, it is no surprise that others are encouraged to try the same tactic. Local and national leaders have blown the dog whistle giving permission for violent and illegal actions against our government and the President.

University of New Mexico Professor of History Richard Bortolot said, "Anybody who can blow up the Pentagon gets my vote." Only a few months later, failed comedian and Trump hater, Kathy Griffin was attempting to perform comedy and held up a bloodied, decapitated Donald Trump head for cameras. Why isn't she in a federal prison?

Peter Fonda targeted Trump's 11-year-old son, Barron, saying, "We should rip Barron Trump from his mother's arms and put him in a cage with peashooters and see if mother will stand up against the giant a--hole she is married to ..." You remember Peter whose only claim to fame is riding a motorcycle and being the brother of Jane. The two Fondas were apples that fell far from the tree. Their father, Henry was an early Republican because of his respect for Lincoln and later changed his party affiliation; however, he was a classic liberal who was balanced and honest.

Representative Maxine Waters declared, "I will go and take Trump out tonight," and while she qualifies as liberal, she does not qualify as balanced. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi said, "I don't know why there wasn't uprisings all over the country. Maybe there will be." Well, we know how that turned out, but Nancy has not repented in sackcloth and ashes on national television. Nor has she been removed by a gutless House.

New York Democratic Governor Andrew Cuomo said, "Show me where it says protesters are supposed to be polite and peaceful." So, I pulled out my pocket Constitution and read in the First Amendment "for the right of the people assembly to assemble ..." I will be glad to lend Andy my copy of the Constitution if he doesn't have one. Former Attorney General Eric Holder, who was held in contempt of Congress, said, "When they go low, we kick." Joe Biden once said that if he and President Trump were in high school together, he'd "take him behind the gym and beat the hell out of him."

Actor Johnny Depp asked, "When was the last time an actor assassinated a president?" Broadway star Carole Cook invoked Abraham Lincoln's assassination while discussing President Trump with a photographer by saying, "Where is John Wilkes Booth when you need him?" As an aside, who is Carole Cook? A commentator on MSNBC, GOP establishment consultant Rick Wilson said, "They're still going to have to go out and put a bullet in Donald Trump." Wilson is known as one of the elite "Never Trumpers."

Madeira told thousands of Women's March attendees in Washington that she has "thought an awful lot about blowing up the White House" since President Trump was elected. The crowd cheered heartily. The lady dropped some T-bombs on the crowd and closed by saying, "I choose love." Did the leftist media demand she be arrested or at least be investigated? Or be required to apologize? No, she continues to sing or whatever she does, 50%, of total, should have a big H branded on her forehead for encouraging blowing up the White House and closing her "speech" with shouting love.

Many prominent people have compared President Trump to Adolf Hitler for his comments targeting some Mexicans and Muslims and for his populist politicking style. Others have called Trump a dictator, while others accuse him of killing vast numbers of people because of his handling of the Chinese coronavirus. When Hitler came to power as Chancellor of Germany in 1933, it must be remembered that he was voted into office. The people had high hopes he would solve their problems—the poverty, the unemployment, the hyperinflation in 1923, and the worldwide depression in 1929. One big change he made was the privatization of state industries with almost 25% increase in weekly income. But then, next of that impressive increase was because of an unprecedented increase in war production.

All Germans knew the preparation for war was contrary to the Versailles Treaty that ended World War I. That treaty was a humiliation for Germany, and many honest historians would declare it was unjust and unnecessary and much overkill. Germans were delighted that the economy was on the road to recovery, and their nation was getting stronger daily and was deserving of respect, even pride. Hitler told them what they wanted to hear; they were building an empire that will survive a thousand years. It lasted almost 13 years.

After dragging Germany and other European nations into the greatest conflagration in man's history, all honest Germans knew he was a madman. There were many plots to kill Hitler as the number of German deaths multiplied enormously, as their major cities were bombed every night, as food and necessary products were almost impossible to find, and as they realized they were the parish of the world. Hitler needed to die; after all, he was evil. Innocent people were being killed, the nation was reaping World War I, and his death would save Europe as well as Germany. Almost all reasonable people agreed. Hitler had to go for many legitimate reasons. A few religious leaders opposed any assassination attempts, while other religious leaders were actively involved in trying to kill their chosen leader.

So, the logic is simple to the stuporous: if Trump is dangerous and is destroying America, then it would not be wrong, yes, it would be right to save everyone by getting rid of Trump. We are seeing and will continue to see those on the left building their case for the diagnosis, the defeat, the dismissal, and the death of Donald Trump.

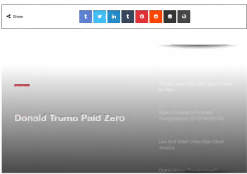

If that happens, America will end up on the garbage heap of history. The public educational system, the major media, and the unabashed churches have been laying a foundation for a race, religious, or regional war for almost 50 years.

We are at an unprecedented time in our history, and in November, we will know whether we see the end of Washington, Jefferson, and Madison or Bivis and Butthead.

And Belov.

Black Lives Matter Led to Record Number of Mass Shootings

3 weeks ago

👁 1 🗨 1 📧 1 📧 1 📧 1

By Daniel Greenfield — September 16, 2020

Even as gun violence breaks records in New York City, Chicago, and Philly, the Democrats don't have much to say about the epidemic of shootings or their pet cause, gun control. While activist Democrat prosecutors like Attorney General Letitia James have neglected to deal with the violence and are indeed targeting the NRA, they aren't really talking about gun control.

Mass shootings are rarely mentioned anywhere even though there are more of them than ever.

A Washington D.C. mass shooting at a cocktail last month that wounded 30 people was treated as another local crime story. And there are a lot of these local crime stories as shootings rise.

New York City has blown past 1,000 shootings, of all kinds, individual and mass, Philly hit 1,000, and Chicago is approaching 3,000 shootings.

3 Democrat cities alone will soon account for some 5,000 shootings. These are the kinds of numbers we used to see out of Iraq. Now we see them in America.

The Gun Violence Archive recently tweeted that it "had never totaled more than 60 mass shootings in a single month — it has now eclipsed that number for four straight months, and September is on pace to do the same."

From 2014 to 2019, there was an average of 248 mass shootings. 2020 is far from over, but there have been 430 mass shootings, and the Gun Violence Archive estimates it will hit 580.

In just the first 5 days of September, there were 21 mass shootings.

And these mass shootings are inescapably tied to the Black Lives Matter violence that crippled police, wrecked public safety, and led Democrats to call for an end to cops.

Every full month in which Black Lives Matter riots and rallies took place has recorded more mass shootings than the first three months of the year combined.

There were 26 mass shootings in January and 86 mass shootings in June, the first full month of Black Lives Matter riots.

There were a total of 70 mass shootings in the first three months of the year and a total of 260 mass shootings in the previous three months which were filled with BLM violence.

Beyond the violence of the riots, which have included firebombs, shootings, stabbings, and multiple assaults on police officers, random drivers, shopkeepers, and anyone in the way, the Democrat political movement led cities to put back police or tied up officers with the riots.

Between 2008 and 2015, murder was the leading cause for black men between the ages of 15 to 34 with over 55,000 dead. That's over 10 times the numbers of US casualties in Iraq.

These are not normal numbers and they're what we don't talk about when it comes to gun violence. Gun control activists are eager to make suburban school shootings into the face of gun violence. Gun violence doesn't come out of suburban schools, but urban ganglands.

That's why the Democrats aren't talking about gun control during the worst epidemic of gun violence in years. That and the reality that gun violence is associated with their support for BLM.

Cities that had fairly low levels of crime and were at the epicenter of the riots, Portland, New York City, and Austin, have achieved staggering decreases in shootings and murders.

In Portland, where there have been over 100 days of Black Lives Matter riots, shootings shot up from 289 for all of 2019 to 466 for the year so far. In the first month of BLM protests, shootings nearly doubled from 21 in 2019 to 61. In August, the shootings nearly tripled relative to 2019.

In Austin, the murder rate rose 67%. At the end of August, the city recorded 3 murders in 24 hours. A homeless woman was shot when 68 humans evacuated began fighting in the street and shooting each other.

"We knew we have at least 25 rounds discharged last night," Chief David McKelhan mentioned at one press conference.

In New York City, shootings rose 140% since the period roughly overlapping with BLM riots. And murders rose by over 50%. Behind those numbers are 80 murder victims. They're part of the political price that Mayor Bill de Blasio and New York Democrats paid for their support for BLM.

In the first full month of Black Lives Matter riots and riots, the number of daylight shootings in New York City more than tripled. Daylight shootings are a mark of brown gang violence.

By August, 43 people had been shot in 48 hours, and 3 people had been killed in one day.

Democrat leaders have responded to the wave of violence by discrediting it and attributing it to the effects of the pandemic and to social inequalities.

"Gun violence is a symptom of social ills," Portland City Commissioner Jo Ann Hardesty, who had falsely blamed police for solving fires, insisted.

"It's been an exhausting 100 days for our city. But may I remind everyone just how exhausting it is to live while Black in America. Let me remind folks that the civil rights movement lasted a lot longer than 100 days and make no mistake — today's struggle against police violence and creeping fascism is the new civil rights movement," she wrote, cheering 600 days of BLM terror.

Exhausting is one way of putting it. July was Portland's deadliest month in three decades.

The BLM riots aren't just a struggle session or cancel culture. They're doing a lot more than terrorizing citizens or burning down stores. The BLM riots and movement are killing people.

Democrats had spent years falsely claiming that guns, rather than criminals, kill people. Now they've moved on to blaming gun violence on social ills that will be remedied by defunding police and shifting even more money into the arms brokers and corrupt welfare state.

Crime, like homelessness, will just become another fact of life, if they have their way. Every increase in crime will be met with more welfare spending and less police until every major city becomes an unlivable war zone where only the poor and the foolhardy still make their home.

Even now the cities that have gotten behind police defunding are suffering massive violence.

Not all that long ago, the Democrats ran on vowing to stop mass shootings. Now they don't want to talk about them. And who can blame them? Few murderers want to confess their crimes.

Democrats lied about crime and the cops, and thousands of people were wounded or died.

A 77-year-old military veteran was attacked inside a post office in Red Bluff, California because he was wearing a "Make America Great Again" hat.

Television station KRCR reports the unidentified victim is a Vietnam War veteran. He was treated and released from a nearby hospital.

He was reportedly attacked by 26-year-old Daniel Gornica-Merfina.

"I just feel kind of bad, seven years in the military, Vietnam veteran and 30 plus years in law enforcement and you're always taught situational awareness. And this guy came out of ... I never saw it coming," he told the television station.

He was wearing the iconic red MAGA hat along with a "Don Blue Line" face mask when he was approached by the man and a woman.

"She looked at me and she goes, 'We just don't like people like you.' Just kind of got shocked a little bit and said, 'Well, that breaks my heart,' and no more sooner out of my mouth, I get hit on the left side of my head," he said.

By Gregory Hood, American Renaissance – September 29, 2020

I don't know how many all-black communities there are in the world. Probably hundreds of thousands. In Africa, you expect to see all-black villages and towns. The cities are overwhelmingly black, with a sprinkling of whites and Asians. In the United States, many cities that were built by whites are now overwhelmingly black: Birmingham, Detroit, Jackson, Cleveland and many others. They are bad places to live; even those who preach about "inclusion" think so.

I mean the destruction of American cities through population change, but I have no desire to move to these places. Its fine for blacks to have places for themselves. The countless black do-ho do-ho activists don't trouble me either.

Sen. Dickson once said that every morning, many whites go to jobs where they will spend the day thinking of ways to help non-whites. No non-whites get up in the morning and worry about how to help white people.

There's a similar double standard in how people live. Those with power want every white nation to turn brown. We apparently have a moral duty to accept as many immigrants as want to come. The United States is on the brink of being a Third World country already. Matthew Yglesias, hardly a fringe figure, is calling for "one billion Americans." As Ann Coulter wrote in 2007, "If this sort of drastic change were logically imposed on any group other than white Americans, it would be called genocide." Leftists such as Mr. Yglesias are eager to extinguish the historic American nation for good.

Mrs. Coulter is nearly wrong, but it's not just white Americans; it's all whites, even in our ancient European homeland. The UN and the European Union forcibly criticize Eastern European countries for not taking in enough Muslims. The Great Replacement is not a conspiracy theory. It's a fact, openly acknowledged by those who want it to happen.

It's not just that there can't be a white country. There can't be even a white town. In Germany, nationalists created a small community in the East. Journalists reacted with fury, as if it was the Fourth Reich.

There is an Afrikaner enclave in South Africa called Orania. It's the one place in the whole country that is exclusively white. Afrikaners suffer under government-enslanted racial discrimination, high black crime rates, and frequent attacks on white farmers. The government has banned Afrikaner self-defense networks that could protect them. Afrikaners are a subject people under a hostile regime. It's not surprising at least some of them want one place to call their own.

"Welcome to the Afrikaner home. Pay with the Ora."

The ANC government is increasingly hostile to this haven. Prominent figures recently called for Orania to be destroyed and its leaders jailed. "If our laws on racism are not strong enough an nation to do that," said ANC activist Geri Nkomo, "pass the necessary legislation." Orania's right to exist is in the South African constitution, but so was a guarantee that the government would not take white land. The world media is implacably hostile to Orania.

- "Inside South Africa's whites-only town of Orania," BBC News
- "Inside the all-white 'Apartheid town' of Orania, South Africa," ABC
- "An indictment of South Africa": Whites-only town Orania is booming," The Guardian

Why do journalists care? Why are a small group of people who want to be left alone a threat? The last story gives it away. It's safe, growing, and prosperous. It works. Its success reveals the failure of the "rainbow nation," a wreck surviving on what whites created. Author Tembeka Ngokukunda calls Orania a representation of "downright hostility to the idea of a single, united, non-racial country." Maybe so; black politicians sing songs about killing Boers.

We must defend Orania. However, we must also raise our own flags. What is our tale if trends continue? Some white advocates, including myself, have compared our situation to that of the American Indians facing European settlers. If we continue to encourage Third World colonization, we will become a minority. The situation known as "the economy" might be better according to some measurements, but we won't be better off. We will have lost control of our destiny. We will have been replaced.

The official flag of Orania.

Unlike the American Indians, we won't get reservations. Indian reservations are often depressing, but they have advantages. They have a certain amount of sovereignty. People enjoy special benefits from belonging to a tribe or Indian "nation." That is why so many people want to join, and why tribes guard their identity. The Cherokee, for example, expelled blacks. They don't want to dilute the benefits they receive from being part of a privileged class. Of course, blacks act the same way when dislodged white women pretend to be black.

Whites will never enjoy such privileges if we are a minority. When people attack "white spaces," they are admitting that we create prosperous, peaceful, attractive communities. Whites don't need fantasies like "Wekenda." We actually build them.

Can blacks do the same? We may find out. Nineteen black families have bought 97 acres of land. This, they say, will be "Freedomtown," where they can live away from white privilege and police oppression. ("Pro-black" whites, wherever that means, will supposedly be allowed to live there.) Journalists could barely conceal their jubilation. Their articles had a far different tone than the ones about Orania.

- "19 families buy nearly 97 acres of land in Georgia to create a city safe for Black people," CNN
- "Freedom, Georgia: Black families making safe space for black people in Wilkinson County," Fox 34
- "19 Black families purchased 96.71 acres of rural Georgia land for a 'fresh start' with a Black-centric community," Insider

I wish "Freedomtown" well. If blacks want to create their own communities, that's fine with me. I wish more would do it, but I suspect "Freedomtown" won't be truly independent. It is already getting donations from a website we privileged whites can't use. It will enjoy privileges from the "host" American government. The town may even be the subject of a television show, which will no doubt spur more donations.

One of America's greatest mistakes was stopping Marcus Garvey from taking blacks back to Africa to build an empire of their own. If blacks want their own community, good. If "pro-black whites" want to live stronger blacks, good for them, too. Let's hope Freedomtown has better luck than the Seattle anarchists who tried to start an "autonomous zone" that quickly sank into anarchy and chaos.

Black expanded Marcus Garvey

However, I demand the same right for whites. Whites should have the right to build our own communities. We must restore so-called "restrictive covenants" and freedom of association. Just like blacks, we need pieces of our own, ultimately a country of our own.

Would we be allowed to start something like "Freedomtown"? It wouldn't be easy. If the Democrats win the next election, they will surely restore the Affirmatively Furthering Fair Housing \(AFFH\) rule that would make white neighborhoods accept non-white welfare recipients. Maybe a white community could escape destruction by refusing to accept federal money. However, the Supreme Court said serving food that traveled on roads was "interstate commerce," which justified forcing integration on even a tiny restaurant. Uncle Sam would probably try something.

That said, it's still a way forward. Many of us are tied to a certain place because of mortgages, family, and jobs. We must still carpenter in a smaller version of "The Great Trek." The experience itself could forge a new people.

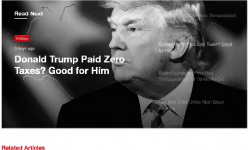

Many of us have already become de facto refugees in our own country, fleeing non-white cities for the suburbs. We may already have to be surrounded by like-minded neighbors just to be safe. White flight will speed up regardless of what white advocates say or do. The pandemic may leave us unprepared benefit because more people work from home, giving us more freedom to choose where we live. Once this white migration is happening anyway, we should give it a direction and a goal, and pursue as much local autonomy as possible.

Where to go? We shouldn't discuss that on the Internet. You should work that out among yourselves, in your own networks and groups, offline. There could be many American Oranias.

Maybe the government would try to stop it. Maybe the media would launch a far-left campaign against it. Let's leave that fight. It's caring anyway. Whites need to raise banners of hope and stop mourning our decline and waiting for someone to save us. Regardless of who is president, our plan should be the same. Let's build something of our own. We won't get the institutions' support our "inferior citizens" get, but we built this country, we carry the torch of Western Civilization, and we must build anew.

BLM: Justice Organization or Weapon of Mass Destruction?

1 WEEK AGO

by Kris Barker - September 25, 2020

As we have seen in recent months, there are radical groups who have become more prevalent in our society. Today we will delve a little deeper into BLM and their claims for social equality and justice.

BLM, social justice warriors or radicalized groups with ulterior motives?

Black Lives Matter global network, not to be confused with Black Lives Matter foundation inc (which has nothing to do with the social justice organization), was started in 2013, they claim, "Black Lives Matter foundation, inc is a global organization whose mission is to eradicate white supremacy and build local power to intervene in violence inflicted on black communities by the states and vigilantes".

Does BLM really have Black lives in mind? Do they actually spend money on the communities who they claim to help or are they just another top-level money laundering scheme?

We are finally seeing the true BLM agenda here in the tumultuous year of 2020. In my opinion, BLM doesn't care about Blacks but rather is just another divisive group, hell bent on destroying the western way of life.

As co-founder Akeel Adams stated, "I will support the looters 'til the end of the day. If that's what they need to do in order to eat, then that's what you've got to do to eat." My question is, are they looting grocery stores only? Are they destroying the evil oppressive "White man's" businesses only?

As anyone who has seen the "riots" on the television can attest, they are taking electronics, clothing along with anything that isn't nailed to the floor. Black, White, Hispanic, Asian, no business is safe from their wrath. I could understand if they were starving and looting to eat but they're not, unless a 60-inch T.V. makes a great snack.

Akeel Adams also believes that looting taking place is "reparations". Reparations for history that has no bearing on you today. All cultures throughout history have committed atrocities against other cultures/nations. There have literally been slaves since the beginning of recorded history, starting in Babylon.

There is no surprise to their true intentions as in Patrice Cullors (BLM co-founder) stated in a 2015 interview with The Real News Network, "We are trained Marxists. We are super-versed on, sort of, ideological theories. And I think that what we really tried to do is build a movement that could be utilized by many, many black folk."

I find it fascinating that a group who believes their people are being oppressed would even support Marxist ideals. If they are "Well versed" they would know it is one of the most oppressive forms of government.

These passages are taken directly from their website: "We affirm the lives of Black queer and trans folks, disabled folks, undocumented folks, folks with records, women, and all Black lives along the gender spectrum. Our network centers those who have been marginalized within Black liberation movements."

"Our continued commitment to liberation for all Black people means we are continuing the work of our ancestors and fighting for our collective freedom because it is our duty. We acknowledge, respect, and celebrate differences and complementarities." Again, unless you are white.

"We disrupt the Western-prescribed nuclear family structure requirement by supporting each other as extended families and "villages" that collectively care for one another, especially our children, to the degree that mothers, parents, and children are comfortable.

"We intentionally build and nurture a beloved community that is bonded together through a beautiful struggle that is restorative, not exploiting." Whose, in fantasy land? I have only seen destruction, violence and looting.

"Every day, we recommit to healing ourselves and each other, and to co-creating alongside comrades, allies, and family a culture where each person feels seen, heard, and supported."

You really have to pay close attention to what they are saying. Everything said has purpose, for instance, "comrades". This term, although not Russian, which also means ally, here in America, is almost synonymously used as and thought of as a Russian term for friend.

If black lives truly matter, why don't we see violent protests in Africa?

Oppression, injustice and slavery still exists in Africa today. However, we hear no call from BLM to end it. Neither do they care for African children who are abused, forced to work in mines, raped and killed every day. It's because in their world black on black violence is not considered a crime.

For the same reason, not a penny has gone to fixing social and economic issues faced by blacks in urban areas such as Chicago. They buy big beautiful buses to ship "protesters" all over the country when they could spend that money in black communities. They could donate it to stop the African slave trade, or they could help underprivileged blacks open businesses and go to school, which would enrich the black communities of America. They could do far more good than going to cities across the countryside and causing civil unrest. I believe their goal is a bit more nefarious than they would like people to believe.

Who funds BLM?

This is a much trickier question to answer. We all know George Soros, famed philanthropist is supposedly behind some of it (among others) has plans for a One World order (which is a whole other subject by itself).

Even though not many companies come out directly and say they fund BLM, it's what they don't say that says the most. Lots of companies who donate and support BLM do it very secretly. They most likely don't come out into full public view about where their donations go as they might be fearful of backlash.

The most vocal of organizations in support of the BLM are Amazon, Starbucks, Google, Airbnb, Axi, Netflix, DoorDash, as well as the NFL, NBA and MLB. In recent days we have found out that the CCP (Chinese communist party) has involved itself in the BLM movement. This was not a shock to me as this movement is exactly what China needs to help lay the groundwork for their total infiltration and destruction of this republic.

Follow the money

Where does the funding for BLM go to? Many people believe they are doing good for the black community when, in fact, they have done little to nothing in these communities. Let's follow the trail.

If you go onto the Black Lives Matter website and click to donate, and scroll down, you will see that their donations go to Adnkab. You ask, who is Adnkab? Great question. Their website states, "Adnkab is a nonprofit organization that builds local democratic sound on to run their own small-dollar fundraising programs"

So, basically this funding goes to the Democrats. Could it be to help with the destruction of the presidency? Of course. As we have all seen on TV and other media outlets, all the riots, looting, killing and destruction of property that has been prevalent in the USA. BLM is one of the major organizations behind it. Despite claiming to be the protectors of black lives, they show zero outrage for the killing of blacks by other blacks by the hundreds in Democratic-controlled cities. Some say they ignore black owned businesses being burned and looted. Why don't these black lives matter, too? Because that doesn't fit into their real political agenda.

So who really are BLM?

I believe BLM to be nothing more than a terrorist organization with the explicit intention to destroy the greatest country bestowed upon men. They are working with many outside forces such as the Muslim Brotherhood, China, George Soros, the UN, Republican/Democratic politicians and the owners of the "Federal Reserve", to create chaos in order to destabilize our society and economic situation, all for the push to the One World order.

Unfortunately, the masses who are complacent in this along with inept politicians on both sides of the tale are being paid to aid in their own destruction. They are penny wise and pound foolish. The few bucks they will receive today will mean nothing once the takeover is complete.

I hope they enjoy the train ride to the camps once their usefulness has expired. The destroyers of freedom and liberty have no friends and take no captives. Not to mention, if you crossed the greatest nation on Earth, what are you going to be capable of when the real oppression starts, or in fact are you going to be the oppressors? Like the old adage says, "Be careful what you wish for because you just might get it."

ITALY: Pro-Migrant Priest Murdered by Tunisian Migrant That Had Previously Avoided Deportation – Police

2 weeks ago

011 minute read

By Lionel Du Gues, National File — September 16, 2023

Bishops claim alleged murderer was “mentally ill” at time of incident.

Police say a pro-migrant Catholic priest from Northern Italy was brutally murdered by a Muslim Tunisian migrant after the migrant believed the priest was part of a plot to have him deported back to Northern Africa.

Father Roberto Malgouiri was found stabbed multiple times to death, including one fatal stab wound on his neck, close to his home in Como.

According to Church Militant, the alleged suspect is homeless 53-year-old Tunisian Migrant Mahmoud Radhi who said that “The priest acted like a dog, that was right.”

Western News reported that Fr Malgouiri, 51, knew his alleged killer and was conducting his morning routine, delivering aid to the needy in the small community of Santa Giuliana. Radhi had reportedly waited for Malgouiri outside of the rectory after purchasing a large kitchen knife before stabbing him in what appears to be a premeditated attack.

Radhi then walked around 600 yards, soaked in blood, to the nearest police station where he turned himself in. It was revealed that Fr Malgouiri had previously supplied Radhi with assistance in the past.

Local bishops immediately declared that Radhi had been suffering with a mental illness at the time of the murder, although no “confirmed psychological problems” were discovered by investigators and Radhi did not have a history of mental illness.

The Tunisian had arrived in Italy in 1969. Shortly after his arrival, he married an Italian woman, granting him a residency permit which was later revoked when he divorced his wife.

Radhi was imprisoned in the past five years for evading local immigration laws numerous times. His deportation in 2017 was halted over an alleged eye problem and was further delayed over the coronavirus pandemic.

National File has previously reported on a few similarly tragic stories involving pro-migrant activists having their lives cut short by migrants in their care.

A local pro-migrant philanthropist was brutally murdered by a young Afghan migrant; he was hearing at his home in Normandy, Northern France, earlier this year.

Another woman—also from Normandy—was stabbed to death by a migrant she was sheltering at her apartment. It was later revealed that the pro-migrant activist had recently terminated a romantic relationship with her alleged killer.

"Peaceful Refugee" Gets 30 Years Sentence for Killing an Italian Man and It's Just One of the Many Murderers

July 11, 2020

0 0 1 minute read

By Alex Durrant

When Stefano Leo from Turin was murdered more than a year ago now, his murderer, Said Mechacout, a migrant from Morocco, said, that he killed an Italian man for being too "white" and too "happy." Well, recently, this "peaceful refugee" has been sentenced to 30 years in prison. 27-year-old Said Mechacout confessed to the killing a month after it took place in February, 2019.

Prosecutors Enzo Bucarelli and Dario Santoroello sought for the maximum 30-year sentence. They noted, that Mechacout showed zero remorse for his deed.

The mother of the victim, Mariagrazia CHIL, commented after witnessing the sentencing "We have always been confident. And the sentence gives us that reason. Justice has run its course," according to Corriere della Sera.

Mechacout's defense commented on the sentence that they expect it to be reduced on appeal, due to the fact that subject confessed to the murder.

In the same confession, however, the immigrant said that he killed the Italian man simply because Leo was white and looked happy.

"I killed a white person because, obviously, that would cause an outrage," the murderer told law enforcement officers.

"I looked at him and I was sure he was Italian. I wanted to kill a guy like me, take away all the problems he had, children, remove him from his friends and relatives."

This murder is one of many in Italy, which have been perpetrated by migrants. The murder of a young Italian girl Pamela Mastropietro, who was disemboweled alive by a Nigerian migrant in 2018, is one of the most brutal on the list.

USA Patriotism

Patriotism is at a Record Low

1 WEEK AGO

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12

By Gregory Hood, American Renaissance — June 17, 2019

In 2018, Gallup reported that American patriotism was at a record low.

Liberal patriotism declined even when Barack Obama was president. Fifty-one percent of liberals were "extremely" proud to be American in 2012, but only 36 percent felt that way in 2016, with the number declining every year in between. Just 26 percent of 18 to 29-year-olds were "extremely" proud to be American in 2016, compared to 55 percent in 2013. It's probably no coincidence that this is also the most "diverse" (non-white) generation in American history.

Still, declining patriotism shouldn't be blamed only on non-whites. "The Great Awakening," the dramatic shift leftward by white progressives on moral issues, is also part of it. More educated people were generally less patriotic.

In both 2013 and 2016, conservatives were still patriotic. In both years, 65 percent said they were "extremely" proud to be American. The number dipped very slightly during the Obama years before recovering when President Trump was elected. It never dropped below 51 percent. In contrast, the percentage of liberals who were "extremely" proud to be American never rose above 51 percent, and that was in 2013.

A new study shows patriotism has fallen even further. Just 42 percent of Americans are "extremely" proud of being American. Most Americans — 63 percent — are "extremely" or "very" proud, but that is still the lowest number ever recorded by Gallup. Just 24 percent of Democrats are "extremely proud" to be American.

U.S. Adults' Declining Pride in Being American

How proud are you to be an American? — extremely proud, very proud, moderately proud, only a little proud, not at all proud?

While Republicans are more patriotic than Democrats, this year's study showed something unprecedented. Last year, 78 percent of Republicans said they were "extremely proud" to be American, while this year, just 57 percent were. "This marks the largest year-over-year decline in the percentage of Republicans who say they are extremely proud," reported Gallup.

Republicans' Pride in Being American Drops

How proud are you to be an American? — extremely proud, very proud, moderately proud, only a little proud, not at all proud?

Whites are generally more patriotic than non-whites. About half of whites are extremely patriotic, while less than a quarter of non-whites are. While 53 percent of those 65 and older are "extremely" patriotic, just 20 percent of those 18 to 29 are. The younger generations are also more racially diverse. Patriotism declines with education.

"Racially charged incidents involving police and the resurgence of the Black Lives Matter movement have increasingly contributed to a national discussion about the challenges blacks face in society and likely also factor into the decrease in American pride among nonwhites," said Gallup. These "racially charged incidents" were promoted by media. It's a manufactured crisis. Blacks and Hispanics benefit from affirmative action and preference in government contracts. President Donald Trump has given Historically Black Colleges and Universities permanent federal funding. Nonetheless, America's most privileged groups are the least patriotic.

This isn't surprising. Whites built America. Non-whites didn't. America would have crumbled in the past, would crumble now, and could exist tomorrow without non-whites. It would prosper. Without whites, America would exist only as a geographic expression. It's not surprising non-whites can't identify with figures such as George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, or Robert E. Lee. I may find Malcolm X or Marcus Garvey interesting, but I don't consider them part of my heritage.

What about Republicans? CNN says "It's not entirely clear" why they are less patriotic, but it suggests the President is to blame. Recent Gallup polling does suggest President Trump has lost support among Republicans. Last month he lost the support of 9 percent of Republicans. Many Republicans are angry at the President because he was not tough enough with Russia. Once again, he's spoken loudly and earned a small stick. He talked tough but followed empty. Yesterday, President Trump signed an executive order promising "police reform." This is hardly the "Law and Order" platform he ran on in 2016.

I think the decline in patriotism among Republicans has a deeper cause. Whites are beginning to understand that the system that they support does not support them. Many white Americans are watching their national icons desecrated, their flag burned, and their laws ignored. People do this with impunity. In his most powerful monologue yet, Tucker Carlson correctly said that Black Lives Matter poses "violence works." Conservatives are flooding Black Lives Matter and other leftist movements with millions of dollars and many leaders just walk away with their loot. Soldiers and police kneel to them submissively. Who can be proud of such a government?

Just yesterday, the "conservative" Supreme Court that Republicans fought so hard to establish ruled that it is illegal for businesses to discriminate against homosexuals or transsexuals. Social conservatives who worked for "conservative" judges will lose lawsuits from activists who insist that they belong to their faith or go out of businesses. At the same time, whites, including some who thought they were progressive, are losing their jobs for not being sufficiently deferential to Black Lives Matter. A man who wears a cross to work has more job security than a man who who insists that "all lives matter."

The Supreme Court also refused to hear the Trump Administration's challenge to California's "sanctuary state" law which means that local police can be prohibited from detaining and transferring illegal alien federal custody. No self-respecting country would tolerate this. While conservative white Americans struggle to pay their taxes and exercise a confusing legal system, they can't help but notice that in some cases, non-whites have more privileges than they do. Non-whites certainly have more people who are willing to speak out for their collective interests. An illegal immigrant can organize and demonstrate for his interests in the United States. A white man may lose his job for doing so. Rather than white privilege, we have white dispossession.

Our system of government is anarchy-tyranny. Men such as Thomas Jefferson and members of the American Colonization Society saw this coming, because they knew Blacks would not live under a government of institutions and laws created by and for whites. Now it appears that our laws and institutions will be radically transformed to accommodate blacks and left-wing activists. This is state conquest. It means the end of the constitutional republic that American conservatives took for granted. It also means that American history will be taught in government schools as a source of shame rather than pride. This is what the New York Times's "1619 Project" is about.

Conservative whites may finally be realizing that they are chumps. While white Americans mostly pay the taxes, fight the wars, and obey the laws, non-whites enjoy the benefits of their sacrifice. The American flag isn't "our" flag anymore. It's the flag of a government that feels like an occupation regime. Some whites are beginning to recognize this.

This isn't a majority opinion, of course. There is a real Hispanic American nation, the nation created by the pioneers, settlers, and conquerors who formed a continent. The American flag still represents that nation for most people. White Americans will never be able to break from that nation psychologically nor should they. We cannot deny who we are.

However, the nation is not the government. The US government is not "America." The political entity known as the United States of America was created by secession and regime change, but the nation existed before that. "The Revolution was effected before the War commenced," said John Adams. "The Revolution was in the Minds and Hearts of the People."

Perhaps we are seeing another peaceful "revolution." We are like those police officers in hostile cities who are starting to wonder why they bother babysitting people who despise them. A 2018 study from the Police Executive Research Forum already found that non-whites don't want to be police officers or stay with the force for long. If whites walk away, police departments collapse. The same will happen on a larger scale if whites stop identifying with the Washington regime.

This probably won't happen soon. However, America's Cultural Revolution will continue to gain strength, especially because the Republican Party doesn't oppose it. One wonders if the capital city will even be named "Washington" for much longer. Certainly Andrew Jackson's place on the $20 bill is in danger. Stacey Abrams, one Joe Biden's leading VP candidates, wants to destroy the Confederate memorial on Stone Mountain. Mount Rushmore may come after that, sharing the fate of the Buddhas that once stood in Afghanistan. Perhaps even the American flag will be changed. I suspect the rainbow flag or the green-black-red-black nationalist flags have greater significance to many "Americans" than the national flag.

What's left when the symbols are shattered? America's powerless and unrepresented white majority may finally realize it is dispossessed. Many white Americans think the country has gone crazy in recent weeks. They don't recognize their country anymore. What they don't fully understand is that it's not their country anymore. White advocates know this is the subordination of something that was building for a long time. The sooner other whites catch up to this realization, the better.

Patriotism is a two-way street. It's noble to love your country, righteous to fight for it, honorable to die for it. However, doing such things for other nations while ignoring your own is perverse. Our nation is our people, the real America, and it is that for which we must work and sacrifice.

Our last king, George III expressed this well. John Adams was our first ambassador to the Court of St. James'. In their first meeting, King George, implicitly hinting that Adams should favor Great Britain, said that Adams wasn't known for his attachments to France. Adams said this was true, but added that he had "no attachment but to my own country." "An honest man," said King George III, "will never have any other."

Perhaps patriotism isn't really declining among conservatives. Honest men are simply realizing that they aren't attached to a government that isn't their own.

Suspected Portland Shooter Called Himself '100% Antifa,' Was Arrested in Portland, but Released and Never Charged

The identity of the man under investigation for the shooting death of a Donald Trump supporter in Portland, Oregon has been revealed. He is reportedly an ex-military Black Lives Matter supporter who calls himself "100% Antifa."

Though he has not been formally named by police, the Oregonian is reporting that Michael Forest Reinsehl, 48, is under investigation for the death of Aaron "Jay" Donaldson, a member of the right-wing Patriot Prayer group who was shot and killed during clashing protests in Portland on Saturday.

Reinsehl's sister was interviewed by the paper and confirmed that screenshots of the suspected shooter were of her brother, who has been estranged from most of his family.

The distinctive mark that confirmed his identity to family members is a tattoo on his neck of a raised fist.

"We rushed out to police and confirmed that we recognized Michael in the screenshots," the sister, whom the paper did not identify by name, said.

She condemned the shooting and warned it is not "the solution" to any of the US' problems.

"Violence begets violence and hatred begets hatred. This is not the solution. My heart goes out to the victim. It always has, before I even knew my brother was involved," she said.

Reinsehl's social media posts include him calling himself "100% Antifa" and talking about a coming "war" in America that will eradicate "casualties."

"It will be a war and life of war there will be casualties," he wrote. He called those protesting across the nation in cities like Portland and Kenosha his "brothers in arms."

Reinsehl has a criminal history, including charges stemming from a July 5 protest for carrying a loaded weapon, resisting arrest, and interfering with police. Reinsehl was supposed to appear in court on July 20 to face the charges, but he was missing and the charges were never pursued. The Multnomah County District Attorney's office is currently reviewing the case.

The suspected shooter had also been charged for allegedly using his 17-year-old son and driving 111 mph (178 kph), as well as carrying a loaded Glock pistol he did not have a concealed carry permit for, while transporting his 11-year-old daughter. He was charged with driving under the influence, recklessly endangering another, driving while suspended and uninsured, and unlawful possession of a gun for that incident, for which there is a warrant out for his arrest.

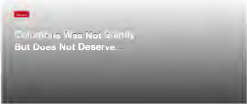

Reinsehl's social media posts have gotten particular attention as both Democrats and Republicans have attempted to pin the blame for the shooting and other violence at protests on one another, with both #BidenRats and #TrumpRats trending on Twitter following the incident in Portland, which stemmed from Black Lives Matter and Antifa protesters clashing with a vehicle consist of pro-Trump supporters.

"Joe Biden has refused to say a single negative word about antifa and the media has spent the last 3 months defending them. Why is that?" Donald Trump Jr. tweeted on Monday, along with a link identifying Reinsehl.

Portland Mayor Ted Wheeler, who has opposed the help of the National Guard to help control increasingly violent protests in his city, blamed President Donald Trump on Sunday for helping to encourage violence with his rhetoric.

The president responded by blasting Wheeler as a fool, and warned that the federal government will intervene if Portland's mayor cannot "clean" his city up.

July 31, 2020

4:10 1 minute read

By Alex Duncan

There seems to be non-stop clowning about how Portland protests are so peaceful and that the federal agents dispatched to protect federal property that are somehow responsible for the violence.

Daily Caller chief video director Richie McGinness spoke with two shirtless “protesters” in Portland, Oregon, after an explosion, asking whether they thought police officers could have been hurt or even killed by such a blast.

“No guys are that explosive?” McGinness asked them.

One of the two men mentioned that they had witnessed “lots of cool explosions” that night. When McGinness explained he was talking about the “big one,” the demonstrator indicated that he had also seen it and added that he had not been the one to throw the explosive.

McGinness then asked them what they thought about this explosion, at which point the “protester” flashed him a “thumbs up.”

“Do you think that would hurt the cops if it flying down on them?” McGinness asked.

“Probably yeah,” the demonstrator casually responded. “I wouldn’t want to sit in there. That’s all I have to say. I didn’t throw it, so I have nothing to do with it, but...”

McGinness then asked him what his reaction would be if the explosion had killed one of the officers.

The first protester just laughed while the second, who had been silent up to that point, replied, “F--- it!”

If one of them cops got killed, good.”

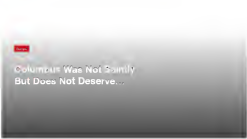

This is exactly the type of dangerous mentality that has embedded itself into the riots and protests across the country. Protesters in Portland have repeatedly fired mortars and other projectiles at law enforcement officers, destroyed public parks and monuments, sprayed the federal courthouse and other governmental buildings with graffiti, and ignited fires inside and outside of the courthouse during the nightly attacks that have taken place over the past two months.

Racist Theory Robs And Rapes Reality

Inviting racial hatred against whites is all in a day's work on CNN. It devolves into a more festive affair when a colorblind like D.L. Hughley joins the network's conga-line of censors.

In a July segment, the comedian, author of "Surrender, White People," regaled those CNN viewers with a medievalist misdeed, by comparing "racism" to COVID-19.

Whitely berched Hughley—who used to be witty and is now a drag—can be an asymptomatic carrier of racism. Just because you haven't done anything racist doesn't mean you aren't racist.

Pay no attention to the COVID-race comparison. It's the Left's loathsome idea of an intellectual gap. Be mindful, however, of the "guilty if you do, guilty if you don't" pop jurisprudence. Collectively convicting an entire racial group for metaphysical crimes is the cornerstone of the Critical Race Theory (CRT) creed.

Flouting Western judicial philosophy, Critical Race Theory says you are a racist without having committed racism, which is like being a murderer, robber or rapist without having murdered, robbed or raped.

How does that jurisprudence strike you?

SYMBOLISM INSTEAD OF REALISM

Deconstructed, racism as deployed by Critical Race racists, is purely a metaphysical affair. It doesn't survive contact with reality, relying for its existence on a loose relationship with the real world.

You might say Critical Race Theory is enmeshed in symbolism and not realism.

Like Critical Race Feminism (CRF), a subprocess of CRT, the symbolic nature of which this writer had traced in a 2020 Obergeim column.

Women's studies courses and English departments have long been littered with postmodernism's jargon. There, text is routinely deconstructed and shredded. Subjected to this academic acid, Shakespeares, Tolstoy, and T. S. Eliot are whittled down to no more than ruling-class oppressors, their artistry reduced to the bare bones of alleged power relationships in society. All this glumness is due to a theory, no more, and one based on a partial and insular view of history (and reality).

To properly place Critical Race Theory in perspective, a young man followed up the column with a personalized tale of desperation. He had the misfortune of drawing a skyscraper in art class. His creation was slighted on by his professor (cum oppressor and right away called out for being a phallic symbol, offensive to women folk, meant as a symbolic assertion of his dominance (cum male).

Where is reality in all this white noise? Nowhere, but in the floods of deconstructed data and their house-broken, white, liberal, male accomplices.

Symbolism, after all, is not reality. What you see in an ink blot test is not real. It's merely even an approximation of reality. A Nietzsche essay amounts to artistic license the reader takes with his subject's reality.

THE LOOTER'S CRITICAL REALITY

As they are deployed today, the dreaded racism and sexism-constructs are anchored in the notion that reality is determined by the allegedly pre-determined, power relationships in society.

Whites, in particular white men and the remnant of a civilization their forebears built, are invariably to blame. Blame for what, you ask? That's easy: for everything.

A "Tella" is laying waste to a little old lady's two-a-bee store in Kenosha, Wisconsin. Blame the racism deprived.

As that would suggest, any black men looting constitutes not a crime with real victims, but, rather, an acting out by the victimized, a reaction to historic "oppression"—a response to The Machine, in accordance with a theory that has been dreamed up in the rarified atmosphere of the academy, and applied outside of it.

A theory, of course, any theory, is always an abstraction, removed from reality. A good theory strives to reality as much as possible, describing and preserving it. A bad theory superimposes a new reality on real events. Critical Race Theory does one worse: it robs reality and heats it.

Another concrete case of the Critical-Race created tension between theory and reality unfolded on "Seattle Refined," a Komo News television show.

The words "riots and protests" asserted a local, privileged professor are racial constructs imposed by the power structure on poor people of color.

Observe how for his "riots" our pedagogos claims the status of a "social construct," a mere theory.

Our teacher names a fall in reality testing and reason. Both poverty and the George Floyd, Breonnae, race riots of 2020, ongoing, are immutable realities. Poverty, black and white, and the race riots are manifestly real. Ontologically, these are verifiable events and occurrences.

What is left, then, and an effort to reality and reason is a theory of racism that opts to deny one incontestable reality—the race—but admits of another—black (but not white) poverty.

To opportunistically privilege only a spectrum of reality, as Critical Race Theory does, is (I repeat) "less than human, less than coherent, less than sane."

In all, it's impossible, geo-poor prove, Critical Race theorizing is best confined to the furred minds of our affirmative action driven universities. Also, it has percolated from America's tertiary institutions throughout state and civil society. By now, the Critical Race riot is institutional: it is the handwork of progressive—regressive, rather—parents, pedagogues and politicians.

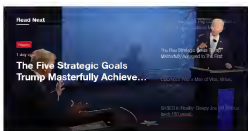

Indeed, the youth rioting on our streets are not outsiders and interlopers: they are us. It is not insignificant that the whiter the city, the worse the riots have been. The pictures that have engulfed more than 2,000 American cities have been the worst in Minneapolis (84 percent white), Seattle (86 percent), Portland (77 percent), and Kenosha Wisconsin (67 percent).

To sum: With Critical Race Theory, a triumphant Left arbitrarily imposes meaning on the phenomenological world as a function of its will to power. It then bullies those who can't go along.

The flight must reject this rot root-and-branch!

WARNING: Mob Rule is Frenzied Rage and Void Of Conscience, Fueled Only By Your Complicity

27 APRIL 2020

By Rick Warren

By Rick Warren, Right Wing Report

How do you think the Bolsheviks and the Nazis started? Tinkering men? Our Founders specifically designed the Constitutional Republic which rejected mob rule. Both Madison and Jefferson meticulously read books on the history of failed democracies in preparation for the drafting of the Constitution. Madison, in particular, set out to avoid what he identified as the elements of those failures, relinquishing control to the demagogues and mob. Madison wrote of the fiercest mob in "Federalist No. 10."

"United and actuated by some common impulse of passion, or of interest, adverse to the rights of other citizens, or to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community."

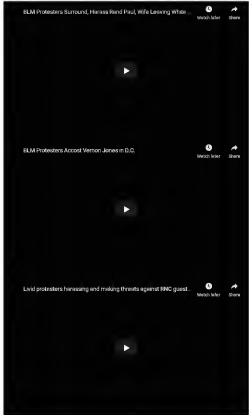

"A pure democracy, by which I mean a society consisting of a small number of citizens, who assemble and administer the government in person, can admit of no cure for the mischiefs of faction."

The Founders with intent designed our system of governance not as a direct democracy but as a representative republic. Inherent within was room for deliberative debate and civil conflict resolutions for principled governance, both in the halls of government and the soapbox gatherings across the countryside. The First Amendment is an essential component of our liberty and should be applied equally to all citizens. There is no valid rationale for the destruction of property, physical intimidation, or inciting violence when practicing one's right to freedom of speech.

Indoctrination and radicalization of citizens, especially students, in our culture have produced the desired effect, and we see evidence of this everywhere we look today in our country. And we see it almost exclusively among those who espouse Progressive leftist ideology. Like the historical mobs of the past, the illusion of an engine grassroots movement is just that. Peaceful redress of grievances differs from the mob in that one is lawful and one is lawless in actions and the latter always has its genesis in well-funded backers of a political agenda that requires propaganda and force. You should be asking yourself why is this acceptable, tolerated, and enabled? The answer is not a comfortable one. The answer is YOU.

America's checked out as the education system captured our youth and fastened anti-American sentiment over the last decades, read more here. They became dormant and allowed themselves to become indoctrinated as educators vended basic history, stored it, and stopped teaching civics altogether. Parents and caregivers essentially abdicated their responsibility to raise productive citizens capable of civil discourse and maintaining societal moral force. The "Mob" has no conscience and feeds off of the terror its victims' experience.

Today, in America you must risk your life to attend a Trump event! This is very uncomfortable to watch but force yourself to put yourself in Rod Paul and his wife's shoes for the full video... can you sincerely excuse their panic? In one section you can watch Mrs. Paul close her eyes and lower her head as if her anxiety is washing over her and she is trying to center.

The videos posted are prime examples of unraveling both civil discourse and moral force. Those exercising political assembly under free speech to share conservative perspectives were respectful, calm, and lawful. The "mob" could have been the same while still expressing their point of view. I suggest that just like "Pavlov's dog," they have been conditioned to be entitled, hostile, threatening, and desecrating. When society does not set the limit, civility and moral force becomes the casualty. There is no excuse for inaction once the evidence of such neglect is on full view. In the wake of violent mobs, there are hundreds of examples of mob rule morality on display in our country.

It has become commonplace now to be attacked in restaurants, fast food establishments, parks, parking lots, political rallies, and so forth, simply for choosing to peacefully express or wear a point of view the radicals disagree with. Presently, in Jefferson's America, one cannot feel safe attending a political rally or party convention for a candidate for fear the mob will physically attack one's person, property, or both. Perhaps more disturbing is the fact one can no longer count on law enforcement to protect you when another citizen is breaking the law in these circumstances. How did we (collectively) allow this to become our country? Again the answer is an uncomfortable one. Apathy, denial, reticence, and acceptance are the root cause.

Tolerance is often an inescapable crop. The infamous press by Martin Niemöller:

"First, they came for the socialists, and I did not speak out — Because I was not a socialist. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I did not speak out — Because I was not a trade unionist. Then they came for the Jews, and I did not speak out — Because I was not a Jew. Then they came for me — and there was no one left to speak for me."

The practice of desecrating becomes habitual and it is far easier to keep one's head down and stay uninvolved.

"The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is for good men to do nothing," — Edmund Burke.

Is this the America you want to live in? Where being white means you cannot eat at a restaurant without the threat of bodily harm?

The mob violates during civility and is persistent with social media campaigns to threaten and or remove one from employment, disrupt relationships, as well as organizing around common goals. They mobilize in our streets, literally stopping traffic at intersections and corners, creating security and safety risks. Swarming in mass on one from a tweet creates chaos which has resulted in millions of property damage, significant physical injuries, deaths, and disruptions to the quality of life for many. The imagination of a President erupted into the mob, setting fire, physically assaults, and delaying/disrupting crowd flow and our collective silence condoned and hardened more of the same to come.

The compiled media highlights the mob's agenda and proceeds to paralyze the audience which only fuels the propensity of violent outcomes. Law enforcement, "stand down" in liberal strongholds, and just like in the video, often from clapping the aggressive actors and the result is the victim becomes prey to the mob's will. And they do so now with impunity. Complicity is at an all-time level high and only applies to those attempting to debate or oppose the Progressive agenda. The same of the above provides a chilling effect on freedom of speech and liberty more generally.

Our ancestors bled and died both at home and on foreign soil for our freedoms. They did not do so for Conservatives, Independents, or Liberals. They did so for their countrymen. Those who came before us chose action over apathy, they chose to not look away over denial, they chose to not cover over intimidation, and most of all they vehemently rejected all that was antithetical to our Republic. Do not look away! Your silence and inaction is acceptance.

Go to the polls and cast your ballot but also be prepared that in the event we lose to the fascists we may be required to take on the mob. Perhaps our ancestors and founders learned about mob rule from the French Revolution. Maybe YDU should pick up a legitimate history book and do the same.

Ethnocidal 'Critical Race Theory' Is Upon Us Like White On Rice

2 weeks ago

👁 5 5 minutes read

By Sara Mercer

Critical Race Theory is the "venetian" lens through which America's new reality is viewed.

Look hard enough and the road for this sub intelligent theoretical concoction becomes abundantly clear.

It's on the playground and in the classroom. Watch for the boasty white kids.

It's in businesses and boardrooms, where management's tumble from the mouths of their white mothers and fathers.

It's in government departments, brought about by the few whites who haven't been weeded out, by quotas and anti-racism for "oppressed" minorities.

There, the insidiously supply demographic persists in shuffling its "oppressor stuff," emitting up to 15 "microaggressions" per minute, by the estimation of the sub intelligent social "science" of human resource department advice.

It's in the FBI (Federal Bureau of Investigation), wherein workshops on intersectionality only just keep the ploys of white privilege at bay among bureau agents who haven't yet been deluged by Trump derangement syndrome.

Critical Race Theory, reports Christopher Rufo, contributing editor at City Journal, has even reached the battlefield — on a mass of mercy.

Introducing the Critical Race Theory element to the U.S. military falls within the mission of this war: global wariness. The military must keep the enemy in good faith during the COVID lockdown.

And, there is nothing that makes wealthy liberals laugh louder than the idea of white soldiers—a mere 55% of the force—walking meekly. The U.S. Military might no longer know Matthew 5:5, but to the enemy, they look like they know who'll inherit the earth. "Yes, he."

This Cultural Marxism of a theory is as ill-founded, purely political, symbolic figment that appeals not to empirical evidence, reason and morality, but to the rolling, basic emotions of rage and resentment against anyone with a white face.

Say it? A "white" face. The words make conservatives censor themselves to utter.

Not even Mr. Rufo. The aforementioned path blazer, investigator, info, and crusader agent, Critical Race Theory in the U.S. concludes his inquiry thus:

"Let me say it plainly: critical race theory is a toxic, pseudoscientific, and racist ideology that is taking over our public institutions — and will be weaponized against the American people." (Emphasis added.)

Yet, the only Americans Critical Race Theory targets with ethnocidal enmity are white Americans.

That's also the main reason why white women like Jessica Krug and Rachel Dolezal pretend to be black. In America, white is bad — and black is beautiful.

Contra Tucker Carlson: More than they long to join the "booming racial grievance" industry—as a guest on the Fox News show consented—these pitiful posers want to be included in black supremacy's mythology.

Like black Americans, these women simply want to be looked upon as carrying the heaviest historic baggage, sadder and more righteous than the rest.

The words "preordained and predetermined" are key to understanding Critical Race Theory, according to which power relationships in society are prescribed — and statically fixed for posterity.

Consequently, Critical Race Theory always inveighs against whites and, for other, more exotic identities.

Over and above seeking to invert and evanescent bourgeois morality—and indications of it like American suburbs — Critical Race Theory does away with reality.

For no matter how impoverished and drug-addicted white America becomes—never mind how often white men are passed over for promotions, opportunities, job placements, and positions, no matter the white-hot hatred etched upon pale bodies by knockout genders—Critical Race Theory has designated the country's founding demographic as oppressor. Forever.

It's as evil and ideologic as all that.

By all means: one of the most profound early warnings against such postmodernism was sounded by Pope John Paul II in his 1988 encyclical "Truth and Reason." With unhesitating clarity, the Holy Father spoke: as a postmodern religious wilderness, against the errors of relativism in modern thought.

Who other than Pope John Paul, back then, had pointed to how "a logarithmic plurality of positions has yielded to an undertheorized plank?" And who among men of cloth had this ecclesiastical acidity to forewarn that inherent in the error of relativism is a negation of the search for truth, and, with it, reason?

If we accept that all positions are equal and no one position better than the other, we have forfeited our ability to discern, and forthwith our Judeo-Christian heritage, cautioned the pontiff.

Little did John Paul know that one postmodern error—both in a plurality of equally weighted truths—would spawn an even greater evil: Critical Race Theory, according to which there is only one inextinguishable truth, and it is that white is evil incarnate.

Little did Pope John Paul know that in the hands of the Church's cherished masses, Critical Race Theory would become a political pincer tool to exact retribution—and worse—against the pigmentally challenged.

BLM's co-founder partners with a Chinese Communist Party organization

7 months ago

By M. Dawling, Independent Sentinel — September 15, 2020

Black Lives Matter is opposed to borders, capitalism, the police, and many of the things this country was founded on. They don't hide what they are — communists.

It will ask you to send your money to an obscure organization, the Chinese Progressive Association, claiming that "Black Futures Lab is a fiscally sponsored project of the Chinese Progressive Association (CPA)."

According to Stateline, "The CPA began as a leftist pro-People's Republic of China organization, promoting awareness of mainland China's revolutionary thought and workers' rights, and dedicated to self-determination, community control, and 'serving the people.'"

The CPA, continued the paper, "worked with other pro-PRC groups within the U.S. and San Francisco Bay Area. ... Support for the PRC was based on the aspiration the members drew from what they saw as a successful grassroots model that presented a viable alternative to Western capitalism."

They showed films to help people understand their revolutionary ways.

CPA works with China's communist government — Mr. Gonzalez writes — and pushes its agenda here in the United States. This is why the CPA would sponsor a new enterprise by Garcia. They espouse the same desire for world communism.

Garcia sets up a worldwide revolutionary empire, starting with the Black Lives Matter Global Network she founded, which now has 15 chapters in the U.S. and several more all over Canada, Australia, and Europe. As Foreign Affairs wrote in its September/October issue, "Today, BLM has a global network of dozens of chapters. This number will likely grow exponentially in the coming years."

You can read the details of The Daily Signal, but one should understand that these people are Marxists seeking the destruction of the United States and our entire way of life.

All of these celebrities, athletes, newscasters, educators who are showing BLM down our throats and either very ill-informed or they too hope to bring communism into the United States, a country they sworn to hate.

Bette Midler Praises US Wildfires as 'Welcomed Distraction' from Trump's Peace Deal

2 WEEKS AGO

1,100,000+ VISITS

By Kelly Sleeps Daily Patriot Report – September 15, 2020

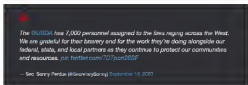

Somewhere in the witchy, twisted brain of actress Bette Midler, she thought it would be okay to completely ignore the historical world peace movement led by President Donald Trump, and call the wildfires ravaging across the country a "welcomed distraction" from the president and his actions.

The never-Trumper posted on Twitter, "Wildfires a welcome distraction to the #OdiousOne, who thinks we will forget all about 'Losers', and 'Suckers' and the newest revelations from #BabWoodward. He gets to thrill his base who love denying science. They should all be compelled to watch 'Well-E' Multiple times."

Girl, what?? We already know The Atlantic was lying about Trump calling our military "losers" and "suckers." It was a publicity stunt, and a terrible one at that. But by all means, press the intensely set fires that are causing death and destruction across our country. It that means it takes attention away from Trump's good deeds.

Bette Midler, you disgust me.

Wildfires are never a welcomed distraction under any means!

Radical leftist Shaun King calls for Jesus statues removal

July 2, 2020

When you think calls for removal of Confederate statues is the highest form of stupidity from Black Lives Matter, leave it to Shaun King to go one step further. Mr. King, one of Black Lives Matter's ideological leaders, now advocates for removal of "white supremacy" depictions of Jesus Christ. "European" Christ is now officially racist.

Some argue that it is unclear whether Shaun King is a Black person (as he claims to be) or also a part of "white supremacy", therefore he cannot make such calls. Some even call him "Islamic K" BLM. Mr. King tweets the following:

He's not the first BLM supporter to justify the destruction of private and public property. Earlier this month, Mike Hernandez claimed that vandalism and looting are not violence.

It's absolutely clear that their calls to abolish and defund the police are just a step on the road to absolute anarchy where no property is allowed. By the way, not a single Democrat official has condemned this movement yet. Clearly Mr. King thinks that looting, defacing statues, destruction of property and nothing less is not enough.

It's not about Confederate war horses anymore. Not a single important figure in American history is safe. Christopher Columbus, George Washington, even Abraham Lincoln faced toppling of their statues or calls for their removal. Today they turn against religious symbols. Their appetite for destruction grows by the hour.

Meanwhile, we are yet to hear a single call from BLM against killing black babies in thousands every week by abortion, or against the never ending rampage of black on-black crime in Chicago. Can it be that Black Lives Matter don't actually care about black lives, only about destruction of everything sacred to a true American?

What will they do after taking down every single statue of Christ? Perhaps that will be the day they finally devour one another.

El Paso Cathedral Suffers Vandalism Attack

7 weeks ago

👁 1 🗨 2 minutes read

By Christine Rousekels, Catholic News Agency

Washington, D.C. Newsroom, Sep 16, 2020 / 12:05 pm MT (CNA) - A vandal destroyed a statue of Jesus at St. Patrick Cathedral in El Paso, Texas on Tuesday, the latest in an ongoing series of attacks on churches across the United States.

According to the diocese, someone entered the sanctuary of St. Patrick's Cathedral Tuesday morning and destroyed a nearly 90-year-old statue of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. The statue had been placed behind the main altar of the church, which was open for prayer at the time of the vandalism.

According to the diocese, the statue is an "irreplaceable loss" and cannot be repaired.

"This statue is one of my favorite representations of Jesus—his arms open wide in welcome, his heart aflame with love for us. I would often take inspiration from this image as I prepared for Mass," said Bishop Mark Seitz of El Paso in a statement by the diocese. Seitz added that he was glad, however, that nobody was hurt by the vandal.

According to the diocese, a suspect has been detained and an investigation by the city's police is ongoing. Seitz urged people to pray for the vandal, as "he certainly must be a person who is greatly disturbed to have attacked this peaceful place in our city and this image of the King of Peace."

"I hope this might be the impetus for him to accept the help he needs. He will be in my prayers," he said.

"In the moment we will reach out in confidence to the One this statue represented and I know he will console us," said the bishop.

The attack in El Paso is the latest in months of vandalism and arson attacks on churches.

Earlier this week, a parish in Malvern, Utah, saw brick to brick attacks. St. Theresa of the Child Jesus Catholic Church had its mosaic statue beheaded followed by burglary on subsequent nights.

"Sometime last night our statue of St. Theresa of the Child Jesus outside of the Main Church was broken and vandalized. We are currently in contact with the police." the parish wrote on its Facebook page on Monday September 14. The statue was pushed off its pedestal and the head was broken off. A planter by the statue was also smashed.

The parish urged people to "pray for the person who did this, that they may get the help they need," and said the vandalism was an "unfortunate situation."

On Tuesday, the parish once again reported vandalism.

"As an update to our parishioners, we are upset to report that one of the houses on our parish property was vandalized and broken into last night," said the parish in a Tuesday post to its Facebook page.

"We have contacted the police and they are forming an investigation. We are planning on taking new measures to keep our parish safe. St. Theresa, pray for us!"

👤 📄 🗨️ 📧 📧 📧

By Brent Schaefer, The Washington Free Beacon

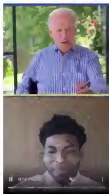

Influencer Jerry Harris was part of Biden campaign's plan to 'win back the internet'

A man featured in a campaign video with Democratic presidential candidate Joe Biden is under federal investigation for soliciting sex with minors, according to USA Today.

Federal agents raided the Illinois home of Jerry Harris, who gained notoriety due to his role in the Netflix documentary Chloe, Monday afternoon as part of a probe into messages sent to minors asking for explicit photos and to meet for sex. The solicitations were flagged for authorities by the 31-year-old's employer.

Just three months ago the Biden campaign used Harris, who has over a million followers on Instagram, as part of Biden's push to sway young voters and 'win back the internet.' Time magazine reported, 'The Instagram live video of Harris and Biden was viewed nearly 300,000 times.'

After publication of this article, the Instagram video was removed from the social media platform. The Free Beacon captures a screenshot of the image before it was deleted.

"Together we have the power to make a real change," Harris wrote in the June 12 post.

The investigation into sexual deviancy of the Netflix star comes as the streaming giant faces an uproar over its airing of Gates, a French film that sexualizes young girls.

Top Netflix executive Bala Rajaratnam recently gave between $100,000 and $200,000 to cohost a fundraiser for Biden.

Environmentalists' fight against US fossil fuel will cause unimaginable harm to nature and will promote child labor

July 8, 2020

👤 1 📖 2 minutes read

Recently democrats tried to shut down Atlantic Coast Pipeline, however Justice Thomas's majority opinion ruled to reverse a lower court ruling that had evaded a permit to build pipeline.

Atlantic Coast pipeline will bring West Virginia natural gas to Virginia and North Carolina, and will be finished in 2022, unless a Biden administration takes over in 2021 and imposes Green New Deal bans of drilling, fracking pipelines and eventually any use of fossil fuels

All in the name of saving the nature and protecting sensitive species. But what environmentalists lack is understanding that their proposal will bring devastation to everything they care. For example, Atlantic Coast pipeline will be 600 feet below Appalachian trail and will only occupy 0.1 mile. In comparison Democratic proposal to use wind and solar energy will require first of all the land area eight times higher of the Washington D.C. and hundreds of 950 foot tall wind turbines that will kill every bird and create an obstacle to everything in Virginia Beach coast

The only harm to the nature that pipeline will bring is the short time of construction that pales in comparison to the damage that will do to all wildlife and enormous machines that use renewable energy

Additionally hundreds of miles of new transmission lines should be built. Just to bring energy from West Virginia to Virginia Appalachian Trail will be covered in these lines, not underground like pipeline, but above, ruining the natural habitat of many species

Somewhere all of this for Democrats is the better alternative to the pipeline. Furthermore, eliminating fossil fuels would mean America would have to replace 100% of its gasoline and all its oil and natural gas feed stocks for pharmaceuticals, cosmetics, paints, synthetic fibers, fertilizers—and plastics for cell phones, computers, car bodies, packaging, wind turbine blades, solar panel films and countless other products. That would require burning some 700 million acres of food crop and habitat land (four times the land area of Texas) into biofuel corn, sugarcane and canola plantations for ethanol and biodiesel!

We'd need some 75 billion solar panels ... or 4.2 million 1.6-MW onshore wind turbines ... or 320,000 10-MW offshore wind turbines ... and some 3.5 billion 100-MW backup batteries. The concrete, steel, copper, lithium, rare earth elements, aluminum, cobalt, plastic and other materials to build them would require nearly twice mining and manufacturing than the world has ever seen—nearly all of it with fossil fuels.

Which brings us to the next problem. Under the Democrats' Green dictatorship West countries will be completely eliminated from fossil fuel market. That will leave thousands Chinese companies to rule it. And they don't care about western regulations. Even today there are 40000 Chinese children working in cobalt mine. Imagine how many more we'll need cobalt if Democrats want to build solar panels.

China alone will soon have 200 times more coal-fired generation than Virginia will be shutting down. During 2008, says consulting company Wood Mackenzie, Europe and the United States will close down 22,000 megawatts of coal-fired power capacity—even as Asia opens 49,000 megawatts of new coal-fired power plants, on top of those it already has and in addition to its growing fleet of gas-fired units.

China is building or financing numerous coal and gas power plants in Africa and Asia. India already has hundreds of coal-fired units and is building or planning 400 more. China and India are also building or planning hundreds of new airports and putting millions of new cars and trucks on their roads. That (plus the CND mining, processing and manufacturing) means, even if Virginia or the entire USA eliminated all fossil fuel use tomorrow—it wouldn't make an iota of difference for global carbon dioxide levels.

These environmental and human rights travesties can happen only under a system of rampant double standards: the same kinds that excuse and ban religious services and funerals, anti-lockdown protests and Trump rallies—while permitting, excusing and praising Black Lives Matter marches that have too often turned into anti-police, riots, looting, arson, beatings, and murders of people like David Dorn and Patrick Underwood, whose also previous black lives certainly haven't mattered much to this crowd.

Time to Remove Hillary Clinton's Name from State Department Pavilion

July 7, 2020

2 minutes read

Recent protests have triggered a wave of monument take-downs across the country. Buildings and streets are renamed, statues are coming down – some toppled by protestors, others removed by local governments.

As we try to rethink our history and our heroes, isn't it about time we put the symbols of our shameful past behind? Isn't it time we stop glorifying one of the most divisive figures in the history of our nation? Isn't it time we remove Hillary Clinton's name from the State Department Pavilion?

Located just two blocks from the National Mall, the Hillary Rodham Clinton Pavilion is a part of the new U.S. Diplomacy Center, the nation's first museum and education center devoted exclusively to exploring the history U.S. Diplomacy.

The glass-fronted addition to the State Department building houses more than 6,000 artifacts telling the story of American diplomacy. Hillary Clinton's name is the first thing visitors of Diplomacy Center encounter the Hillary Clinton Pavilion is the glass entrance hall to the complex.

Democrats and State Department officials rushed open the new exhibit center in the closing days of the Obama administration, even though the project was not entirely completed. Less than two weeks before Donald Trump's inauguration, the former Secretary of State came back to the State Department to take part in the official opening of the new center that was partially named after her.

"I'm flattered to be here at the new Hillary Clinton Pavilion," she said during brief remarks at a ceremony. "I'm sure you will notice it is the most transparent part of the entire project." she joked about her namesake hall of the center.

What an awful statement given the corrupt nature of her tenure, which included her corrupt and illegal use of a private email server while working with sensitive security information.

We always hear that statues and monuments that represent America's shameful history must be removed from the public places because of the pain and unrest that many Americans experience while seeing them.

Why doesn't this apply to the new Hillary Clinton Pavilion? Just imagine the pain and turmoil our servicemen feel when they see Clinton's name on the Pavilion every day on their way to work?

Shock, horror, hatred, debasement – and sorrow. These must be the emotions our military men and women feel when they see Clinton's name and recall the 2012 Benghazi attack.

Thirteen brave Americans fought to the death against an angry, radical Islamist mob. Thirteen hours of gunfire, and short-range missiles at both the U.S. Consulate and U.S. CIA Annex, and no help was given from our country. Calls were made throughout the night begging for help from the State Department, Hillary Clinton – and President Obama. And they watched in real time and gave no help.

Why should we ignore the feelings of our civil servants who must face severe legal consequences for violating security protocols by using a private email server instead of an official government account? What do they feel praising the Hillary Clinton Pavilion every day as they go to work on their secured, archived email server?

Can we please take a moment and imagine the feelings of our diplomats who work tirelessly to protect our country from a foreign aggression, like Russian interference into 2016 election. Wasn't a Hillary Clinton who showed up in Moscow and flattered with Russian foreign minister Lavrov – smiling our from our, pressing a red "reset button" that wasn't even translated properly to Russian? How embarrassed and miserable our young diplomats must feel when they recall this humiliating episode in the history of American foreign policy?

Isn't it about time we come to grips as a nation with our sad past and remove the glorification of one of the most divisive figures? History is full of good, bad and ugly; we can't choose our past. None of us are perfect. And the best we can do for the future generations is to acknowledge the mistakes and try not to repeat them.

We can't go back in time and fix the wrongs of our history, but we can move forward and tear Hillary Clinton's name from the governmental institution and put it into a museum where it belongs and where we can best study her controversial legacy and learn from it.

Seattle's cop-free CHAZ has resulted in uncontrolled violence, here are reasons why

July 5, 2020

After Seattle's autonomous zone recorded its first fatal shooting, the questions of how this "country within a country" has ended up in this tragedy are more relevant than ever.

Some of you may know about the notorious anarchist project known as the Central Hill Occupied Protest (CHOP) or the Central Hill Autonomous Zone (CHAZ) that currently occupies six-square city blocks of downtown Seattle, but for most people it has been difficult to keep up with the news. Here are 14 of the most disturbing aspects of life in CHOP/CHAZ.

1. Police weren't able to help shooting victims in CHOP/CHAZ

According to Seattle's police department, "violent crowd" blocked them from approaching the victims of a shooting that killed one 19-year-old male and left another in serious condition.

The police released body cam records of the incident which shows 6 officers trying to get to the victims. The crowd responded by yelling at the officers.

Footage shows one officer saying, "Please move out of the way so we can get to the victim. All we are trying to do is get to the victim and provide them aid."

After that, someone from the crowd yells in response, "You don't belong here, they're gone, the victim is gone." Another person says, "Put your f---ing guns down."

The footage further shows the officers trying to return to their vehicles, and one officer can be heard saying, "Move, move out of the way" as residents of CHOP appear to hit his car.

No suspects in the shooting have been arrested yet.

2. Armed CHOP/CHAZ "security" guards confiscate cellphones after another shooting

48 hours after the first incident, a second shooting took place on CHAZ territory.

During the shooting, Shawn Whiting, who was live-streaming the incident on Twitch, held his phone confiscated by CHAZ "security" who demanded he delete the footage. In Whiting's video, gunshots can be heard and people are seen running. The actions of the CHAZ security raise concerns that these groups may destroy evidence that could help solve a murder.

SBI: a lot of people are claiming that there are no guns in the zone despite the evidence proving the opposite.

3. CHOP/CHAZ has an armed Soundcloud rapper to serve as their leader

One of the most influential members of the CHOP community is Soundcloud rapper Rex Simone.

Rex appears to have become a quasi-police chief inside the CHOP zone and has been caught on camera patrolling the area with armed guards.

He was also seen handing out AR-15 assault rifles from the trunk of a car. Although Washington is an open carry state, the manner in which the rapper distributed guns to violent strangers had already raised concerns about the possibility of a shooting even before the tragic incident.

Jan Miles Cheung, the managing editor of Human Events, first drew attention to the absurd rise of Rex to the forefront of the CHOP movement in one of his Twitter posts.

There is a video where Rex can be seen chasing an alleged thief who complains that Rex's crew held an "AR" assault rifle on him. The rapper ordered the alleged thief's bag searched, which was also filmed by CNN journalist Jack Posobiec.

Posobiec, who spent time in CHOP to investigate conditions on the ground, said the area is policed by "Rex and elements of Aetha, both of whom are armed. So the media's completely lying to you when they say there's no armed security."

He described the rapper as a "far-left warrior," who had implemented "mob rule" and "mob justice."

Posobiec said there was a notable difference in the atmosphere in CHOP during the day versus the night, and that most media reports painting the area as a peaceful "street festival" were only focusing on what the area was like during the day.

4. The mainstream media has a different opinion

"What you now have is about six or seven city blocks filled with protesters. Now, by all accounts, this is a peaceful protest. It has taken on the tone and tenor of a street festival where you have speakers, and they're giving out free food," CNN correspondent Dan Gheeslin said.

Seattle Mayor Jenny Durkan also described CHAZ as a "block party" while speaking with CNN.

However, some of the protesters do not agree with the "street festival" description. In fact, one protester went furious during an interview with MSNBC after they used the term "street festival" to describe CHOP.

"It's not a street festival. It is not a street festival," the CHOP demonstrator said. "Do not say that. Shame on you for saying that."

5. Sometimes police don't even show up

While the Seattle Police Department states that police are responding to 911 calls from CHOP, the footage from the shooting is not the only case that tells a different story.

For example, a store owner in CHOP, John McDermott, tried to stop Richard Henko who was allegedly trying to break into his store, steal property and start a fire. Despite the owner calling the police 19 times, they did not appear on the scene.

McDermott and his son tackled the suspect, who attempted to cut them with a beer can and tried to hold her down for police who never came.

Video of the incident shows a mob breaking down the store fence and releasing the suspect.

"We're just trying to run a small business, make a living, be good members of society, and try to be good neighbors to the neighborhood and I think we've really been let down by the mayor's office, the Seattle Police Department and the fire department," McDermott said.

Other serious crimes have also been reported in the CHOP zone.

On June 18, police arrested Robert James, who left the zone for sexually assaulting a deaf woman. On the same day, former city council candidate Leah Wiloughby was arrested for starting an arson attack on the area's East Precinct.

6. Businesses and residents are afraid of living in CHOP

While some business owners support the protesters, others are scared due to incidents like the one mentioned above. That is why a lot of businesses across the CHOP/CHAZ area have remained closed, including a Trader Joe's.

Residents have also mentioned that they are scared to live in the neighborhood.

According to Capital Hill Seattle Blog, 16 residents of the Packard Building Apartments located in CHAZ produced a list of joint safety and security concerns, which they plan to send to Mayor Durkan. They stated that at least five residents have moved out of the building in just 48 hours.

One resident, who wanted to remain anonymous, said, "People that are coming out here and participating, whether it was during the protests or during the occupation now, they have the option of opting out. They can choose when to come here and when to leave, and if they want to go home to their other neighborhood and have a good night's rest, they get to choose that."

"We don't get to choose how we participate in this and we have no say of what's going on or any of the outcomes, and so I think there's a growing frustration or uncertainty of what's going to happen and how it's already impacting the permanent residents."

7. One of CHAZ speakers demands reparations

During one viral video which has been viewed over 2.4 million times, a non-black CHAZ member is heard saying that every white person in CHOP should give a black person $10.

The speaker says:

"I want you to find, by the time you leave the autonomous zone, I want you to give $10 dollars to one African American person from this autonomous zone. And if you find that's difficult—if you find it's hard for you to give $10 dollars to people of color, to black people especially, you have to think really critically about in the future, are you going to actually give up power and land and capital when you have it?"

If you have a hard time giving up $10 dollars, you have to think about: are you really down with this struggle? Are you really down with the movement? Because if that is a challenge for you, I'm not sure if you're in the right place.

So find an African American person. Write people, I see you. I see every one of you, and I remember your faces. You find that African American person and you give them ten dollars. Cash up, folks, ten dollars in your pocket. That's my challenge to you. Go it."

8. CHAZ/CHOP supports racial segregation

Seattle's autonomous zone has established racial segregation in a number of ways. For example, some zones are claimed to be only for BIPOC—"Black, Indigenous, and People of Color." Marcus Henderson, a black male and urban farmer with Stanford engineering degree, has been posting his urban garden projects in Cal Anderson Park on Instagram. Including one which has the sign, "This garden is for black and indigenous folks and their plant allies."

9. What CHOP community members really want

Protesters have issued a list of demands, including abolishing the police, the courts, and the prisons.

One of the CHOP leaders, Jaiden Grayson, made it clear that they are not going to be peaceful.

"Every day that I show up here, I'm not here to peacefully protest," Grayson said.

"I'm here to disrupt until my demands are met," Grayson said. "No consent, no build until you break it all the way down."

Grayson also warned they would not stop protesting until their demands are met "by any means necessary."

10. Mental illness on display in CHOP

The stereotype that CHOP is full of drugs has some proofs. For example, two addicts overdosed on the same day and the resulting untreated mental health issues either further challenge the idea that CHOP zone is anything close to the peaceful street festival many are attempting to portray it as.

11. CHOP/CHAZ want to build a border wall

In its effort to establish a truly autonomous zone, CHOP installed barricades and fencing around its territory and even had armed guards to check IDs.

Police Assistant Chief Dennis Haller said, "We've been hearing from community members that they have been subjected to checkpoints set up by the protesters with some armed individuals asking them for checkpoints." Haller added, "we have heard anecdotally of citizens and businesses being asked to pay a fee to operate within this area. This is the crime of extortion."

12. CHOP also performs "deportations"

For those who do not fit the ideological ideals of CHOP, they will be forcibly moved out by the mob.

That was at least the case for one person who was escorted out for expressing anti-abortion viewpoints.

13. Journalists are harassed by CHOP's guards

Journalists with viewpoints that do not perfectly fit CHOP's ideology have been targeted for assault. While organizations like Reporters Without Borders routinely report on intimidation, physical violence and murders of journalists, CHOP has garnered little coverage for how it treats those documenting protests there.

One journalist from NBC's Seattle affiliate King 5 entered the zone and was menacingly followed by what the King 5 reporter said was a young man who had a "9 millimeter gun on his hip". When the reporter confronts the young guard and asked why he is being followed, the armed guard responds, "Just to make sure you're not doing anything that you don't want to be doing." He only agreed to leave the reporter alone if he stopped filming.

Venezuelan Activist Warns America: Socialist Catastrophe Starts with Statue-topplings

July 7, 2020

4 minutes read

A Venezuelan activist has issued a dire warning to all Americans about the ongoing toppling and desecration of public monuments across the country. This process could be a sign of what lies ahead.

America's fall into death spiral of socialism. We all should be extremely worried about the attempted erasure of our history, political activist and popular TikToker Elisabeth Rogiani said in her video address.

This warning comes from someone, who experienced a similar situation as a kid growing up in Venezuela. She has witnessed the ransacking of streets, taking down statues, attempts to rewrite history and that is why she knows exactly what happens next.

"Why do I even worry about some silly statues coming down? Because the last time I didn't care about this I was a teenager," Rogiani explains. "I have already lived through this thing when I was living in Venezuela. The statues came down... Chavez didn't want all that history displayed and then he changed the street names, then came the school cancellations. Some movies couldn't be shown on TV channels and as an end to this."

"We guys think it can't happen to you...I've heard this so many times, but always be on guard," she added. "Never believe something can't happen to you. You need to guard your country and your society or it will be destroyed."

"We didn't believe it could happen to us. Cubans warned us, yet it happened. And there is already a lot of people wanting to destroy the US."

The BLM leaders openly worship what's going on in Venezuela and see it as not a warning, but an example. They glorify murderous Marxist regimes while ignoring people languishing in poverty and lacking political freedoms. These people are living as if their country had been set back by a nuclear strike, and things are not about to get better. Do we really want this future for our country?

If you think this cannot happen here, you are not paying attention. There were times when Venezuelans also dismissed such warnings and thought that nothing terrible could possibly happen. There was a sense back then, in 2005, that life was still normal. But things deteriorated faster than anyone could ever predict.

Venezuela was one of the wealthiest and most democratic countries in South America before being taken over by the leftist mob.

Today, nation's economy is in ruins, people are fighting for survival and the country is experiencing an extreme Socialist truly left, and nothing good comes from it.

Rogiani's video went viral on Twitter, amassing over one million views and then was picked up by mainstream media outlets.

Later, Fox News's host Luane Inglisham invited Rogiani to her show for an interview, where she further elaborated on her vision for America's future, saying that the desecration of public monuments is a "slippery slope" towards a "cultural revolution."

"I don't think they're seeing just what's going to happen next because they're thinking these are just symbols of oppression," she added. "But, I had a lot of friends [who] told me, 'Oh, it's just the Confederate statues.' And, I said, 'No, it's not going to be just the Confederate statues. Just wait and see.'"

She then warned that all historical and religious symbols are in danger of defilement.

"Founding Fathers are going to be attacked. Religious symbols are going to be attacked. And next, probably, monuments."

She also expressed her concern that the attempts to remove the statues of world's most significant historical figures like George Washington, Christopher Columbus, and Abraham Lincoln seem to be a part of systematic efforts to erase national identity and destroy our country from the inside.

"It's an attempt to change the identity of the country. That's my opinion. And, that's what they did to us," she said. "Of course, it was different. At that point, they already had taken the government. But, at this point, they're trying to change the national identity and they're trying to destroy the system. And, if they get to the government, they'll do it."

Rogiani then likened the statue-topplings in the U.S. as part of the BLM protest to the Venezuelan Socialist movement. She also reminded viewers that one of key figures of the organization Opai Torreal actually met Venezuelan leader several years ago.

"In fact, another of those videos that I made on TikTok -- I was talking about how the Venezuelan regime was involved in the protests that are going now. And, we saw the evidence of the BLM founders being an ally to the Venezuelan regime. I saw pictures of them in 2015 where...one of the co-founders of the BLM movement went to Venezuela...and said that she was happy to be in a place with intelligent political discourse," concluded Rogiani.

Black Lives Matter co-founder Opai Torreal reportedly connected to the Maduro regime in 2015. A picture of her hugging the Venezuelan dictator recently surfaced on social media.

Ironically, police brutality, one of the atrocities the BLM movement always claimed to fight against, has plagued Venezuela in the years since Maduro took power back in 2019.

In 2018 alone, according to the Breitbart report, nearly 1,500 minors were killed at the hands of the police. Venezuelan police under Maduro are reported to have imprisoned and murdered a countless number of protesters and political opponents.

Well, apparently Black Live Matter movement leaders don't seem to care much about these atrocities, as it goes against their leftist agenda.

Remember how one of Black Lives Matter's founders, Patrisse Cullors, addressed her organization's core beliefs by stating, (We actually do have an ideological frame... we are trained Marxists)?

What terrifies me about the growing wave of left-wing populism among young generation is that none of them has learned the lessons of history. They haven't seen what exiles of socialism can do to a once thriving people. I fear that they don't realize the destructive power of socialism, of which Venezuela is a prime example.

Unfortunately, Rogiani's opinion is likely to be ignored. Similarly, Cuban exiles in Venezuela were ignored with their warnings. But history shows us that such words often turn out to be true. That's why we need more voices speaking out on destructive nature of socialism.

Recently, New York Post columnist David Marcus shared similar thoughts on Tucker Carlson show. He explained that the escalation from tearing down statues and historical monuments to killing people has been a universal trend. "This is not new in history. We saw this in Venezuela. First, they topple the statues, then they start killing people, and then they take your rights away."

The targeting of the statues has become a waking call for conservatives. President Trump called these incidents a "disgrace to our Country!" on Twitter and promised to put an end to the almost daily targeting of state and federally owned monuments.

To keep his word President Trump later signed an executive order to protect American monuments, memorials, and statues from vandals. The order enforces laws prohibiting the desecration of public monuments, instructs federal law enforcement to prosecute those who damage statues, and threatens to withdraw federal grants from state and local governments that fail to protect their own public monuments and statues.

Donald Trump and Fight against Anti-American Elites

July 8, 2020

2 minutes read

American elites have succumbed to freedom-hating violent protesters and their enablers from the Democratic Party. Will Donald Trump's second term in the office finally help us put them in water?

Does American military serve the country or the radical Left agenda pushed by Antis and Black Lives Matter? Do they need the approval of main stream media for their actions? Or do they obey commands of a person Americans elected to represent them, as they intended to?

The loyalty of our military to the Constitution comes into question more and more, as their support of those who hate true American principles and Donald Trump is getting stronger.

When violence erupted in American cities after the killing of George Floyd, some active and retired senior duty officers' actions tell us that the strongest military complex in human history faces it's biggest crisis, and we need to take action right now.

It's impossible to justify the killing of George Floyd, even though his violent criminal record speaks very loud. Accordingly, police officers involved in his unjust faced charges. However, the spike of violence and destruction of property across many cities is not justified by it in the slightest.

The last year 5 unarmed black men were killed by the police. Recently, 18 black men were killed in Chicago in one day, but their deaths didn't cause any uproar. At the same time, Caucasian suspects are twice as likely to be shot at, by a police officer as black suspects. Does police has more bias towards Caucasians now?

America is the only country in history that had a civil war over racism. We are not a racist nation anymore. We had more casualties in that war than in two world wars and Vietnam combined. Of course we do have racism, as any other country does. Racism has been illegal in America for over 60 years now. Can a racist nation elect a racist president? No. When speaking about racist nations, France, or UK, or Philippines can be blamed easily, but not America.

SEN. Michael M. Gilday, one of the top US naval officers, considered recording a video message to fleet blaming America and its Navy of systemic racism appropriate. Meanwhile, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs Mark Milley gave a commencement speech to the National Defense University in which he apologized for his photo with the president.

Yes, he wasn't wearing a blackface on the photo like the Virginia governor or groping a sleeping journalist like AJ Franken. He just stood beside his boss outside a church near the White House. The church was targeted by violent mob and police had to use pepper spray to clear the area.

One has to wonder, how enemies of America will view these acts of insubordination from our military seniors. Will Chinese army and the Communist regime think that we're able to counter their military advances in the Pacific region? Do radical billionaires feel more eager to attack our troops after witnessing our officers pardon to radicals? Is Vladimir Putin laughing at political correctness affecting top brass at American military?

No. Why, then, we allowed almost two dozens of Americans to be killed on the streets since the George Floyd incident? Many businesses, including minority owned, suffered immense damages. Seattle now has a lawless autonomous zone controlled by angry street anarchists, and Democrats don't care about it at all. And for what?

This happened because the Bush Administration's doctrine of war on American culture, values, and traditions replacing it with Marxist ideas, infecting our media and education, finally succeeded. The good thing is, we can finally see the depths of indoctrination Milley, Gilday, and Meritis and the likes of them have reached. However, their moral compass should have been obvious to all of us long before this has happened.

Look at my major political decision since 1870s: Henry Kissinger pushing Nixon to normalize relations with Cheongs Red Monarchs, economic talking heads trying to justify exporting American jobs overseas to make products cheaper, neocons urging George W. Bush to invade Iraq under the guise of liberation, Obama's advisors deciding to pay over $142 billion dollars for the good of all Americans.

This is what led us to electing non-establishment president in 2016. His second term will bring the answer to the question: can we stop this anti-American movement supported by the Democrats and so-called elites for good? Let's elect him again and see.

Antifa Loves To Endorse What It Alleges To Hate

2 weeks ago

👤 0 🗨 0 minutes read

By Parker Bourgeois, The Last Best Hope

A common statement of leftists is that if they did not have double standards they would have no standards at all. The latest such example comes from an infamed YouTuber who did some colonization at the failed city of Portland. The obvious question that no one in the media seems to care about is how so many unemployed and talentless young people are able to engage in their endless tantrums without suffering for lack of basic necessities. How are they living – eating, sleeping, and functioning – despite no apparent ability nor desire to procure such necessities to meet their basic needs?

The answer comes to us, not surprisingly, in the form of government handouts. Yes, the government that they claim to hate for its systemic oppression is the very same government that enables their ongoing and unimpeded tantrums by way of handouts. Has no one noticed that, rather than oppress, the government is propping them up? To deny, those dangerous fools would appear not to have. Things really get murky when they let black people protest. Eggs! The white systemic oppression!

On top of this, the government support bolks the most foundational tenet of the movement, namely that the Trump government is evil incarnate. Hell, those aligned with him deserve to be shot. In reality, would not Fascistic or totalitarian leaders permit the constant abuse of assembly when they exist solely to fuel vulgar expressions in the form of moments and Molotov cocktails in the worst? One need not imagine the swift response to a cadre of Jews gathering in a 1930s Berlin square with signs and unity of message against Kristallnacht; nor is it a cardinal stretch to wonder how Stalin, Castro, Pol Pot, or Chavex would have reacted to its adversary's cry for an open marketplace and freedom of ideas. And here we are, with Trump being cheered as the bad guy despite permitting American cities to host assemblies that result in the destruction of countless businesses and lives.

Their perception of and commentary toward the government is the most obvious example of the hypocrisy of their cause's tale. These are the same people that want more, not less, government control. They explicitly state they want to move to a totalitarian state, and yet when Trump's government lawfully steps in, they say it is government overreach.

In watching the video, an immediate double standard that presents itself is the complete separation the community of tents has from the rest of the area. How is it separated? With a physical barrier. Well, it seems, are only connected to white supremacy when a Republican proposes them. What more needs to be said? Walls work. CHAZ built barricades. (See: Lightfoot condoned off her street, and these idiots are going so far as to protest their private property taken away at the 5 15 mark.) For the record, it's public property, and, it should be remembered, this is the same group that wants private property abolished.

There is next the display of intolerance usually reserved for eccentrics against Trump. When the brave videographer encounters his first camp-city denizen, the young man welcomes him to the public lands not with open arms and opportunity to dialogue, or even indifference; rather, he is treated to a barrage of hostile words and soon after a few futile attacks from his slingshot. An roadway take-away is that guns might be bad for regular Americans, but all forms of projectiles are accepted when in the hands of the "right" people.

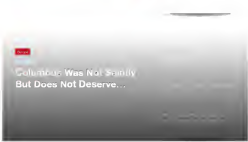

The tents themselves, which house the despicable miscreants and criminals, are too uniform in appearance and spacing to have been purchased individually at Rite and pitched by individual campers. Instead, it is obvious that they were gifted by some government agency (that said government agency's in its brain-scratching effort to appeal to human rights issues, it is fair to ask whose human rights are more important: Are those of the destructive and worthless noobs more important or are those of the community who peacefully abide by cultural and legal dictates that just want to raise a family and go to work?)

It is worth repeating: Would Hitler or Stalin have allowed these nois to even last five seconds before sending in the brute squad, let alone provide for food and shelter; therefore allowing them to continue unencumbered and indefinitely? Conservatives permit it, but also recognize the fragility of the entire enterprise. In early May, they were loaded with condemnation and vitrol from the leftist media and Democrats. Antifa and Black Lives Matter might burn and loot forever, but would President Kamala Harris allow for conservatives to protest any contents of her leftist agenda? How would even a second lockdown protest be received?

One need only observe how well the worst of the worst in American society are treated to realize how good the United States actually is – or at least can be (see above comment on conservative gatherings). Despite offering nothing in return to the greater part of society, we have liberated a group of clueless morons to assemble, protest, and riot in the name of government oppression. We allow for people to be staged and unborn in their quest to actually harm society into something far more oppressive, limiting, and controlling than the very state they currently find themselves.

Well, intolerance, as well as both verbal and physical aggression are all traits of Antifa and their Democrat allies. This video exposes that once more but it should not even have to be declared at this point. Each of those elements they claim to fight against and for which they ascribe endless epithets toward Trump but are, in reality, only things they hate when they can't control the situation or get their way. Make no mistake: Portland is just one example of the hypocrisy that continues to play out. It would all be laughable to watch these losers in men burn parade around as fireloaders of the system if the stakes weren't so serious and deadly.

The Privilege of Oppression

By Gregory Hood, American Renaissance

"White privilege," despite its supposedly onerous benefits, doesn't seem to be worth much. Rachel Deloach, Elizabeth Warren, and many others have claimed to be non-white. Some, like the deluded Vera Dotsenko, may really believe it. Others have simpler motivations. In the caste system developing in the West, non-whites enjoy legal, social, and economic privileges. These are things we can easily define, such as affirmative action; they aren't the mysterious, unknowable ghosts found in an "invisible knapsack" of benefits whites are supposed to be carrying around. Furthermore, even though we are to believe race is a "social construct," DNA tests get the last word. Elizabeth Warren took a DNA test after President Trump mocked her, and found she was at most 1/32 Indian.

Recently a group of "Indigenous" Canadians complained that Owen Senewey, a transgender poet who defined membership in several tribes, could be taking higher identity. The "Two-Spirit" poet's biography changed over the years. Only later in life did she begin to claim, "I walk inside the violence of being an Indigenous trans woman every day." There have been compensations for the "violence," such as the 2019 Governor General's Literary Award for English poetry.

Another Canadian author, Joseph Boyden, also claimed to be Indigenous, which helped his career. However, his accounts about which tribe he belonged to changed over time. Mr. Boyden's uncle reportedly went by the nickname "Indian Joe," despite being Irish and English and sold "Indian" trinkets. Maybe Mr. Boyden was honoring a family tradition. The controversy over his ethnicity takes up most of his Wikipedia page.

Last week, Nigerian-writer James Brindley, who is Archieche, wrote an article called "Claims of Indigenous identity often fraudulent." "Barely a week goes by without an email asking me to expose a person who is 'lying about their Indigenous identity,'" he said. And yet in an earlier column called "Indigenous identity more than DNA," he wrote that identity had "a little to do with blood and ancestry" but "far more to do with the relationship one builds and embodies." If that's true, why bother with ancestry at all? He complains that people lie to get jobs and suggests the solution is to let "Indigenous governments control who gets status, membership, and proof of identity."

Nigerian-writer James Brindley (Credit Image: University of Wisconsin)

But who determines which "Indigenous governments" are legitimate? If blood and ancestry matter only "a little," we're falling back on stereotypes about Indian culture. Why couldn't any "Indian Joe" claim to be an Indian if he sells enough Indian trinkets? Which cultural expressions are authentic and which aren't? However the question is decided, "Indigenous" status isn't a burden but a privilege that people want. It's a privilege.

Dr. Brindley teaches "Indigenous literatures, cultures, histories and politics" at the University of Manitoba, so presumably he knows the real thing from the fakes. It's convenient that his proposed solution – letting Indians decide – could give him more time to write. It's also suspicious that Dr. Brindley has said people shouldn't be allowed to write anonymous comments on stories about "Indigenous people." Incidentally, he could stand an American Renaissance conference without anyone raising an eyebrow.

The whole Anglosphere has the same problem. "An interesting phenomenon in Australia is that a large fraction of the professional Aboriginal Media Personnel are close to phenotypically Indistinguishable: more or less (and more than less), from the average Inogan (lower-class Australian)." wrote Steve Baker. Try watching this video without laughing.

"Australia's first Indigenous neurologist, Angela Das-Santos" recently spoke about Australia's own racial protests. She says "systemic racism" keeps Aboriginals out of science. She says that because she looks white, she has more people would not use if they knew she was Aboriginal. Of course, being Aboriginal (something she reportedly discovered "at university") no doubt gives her the authority to lecture on race relations.

Angela Das-Santos (Credit Image: Research Gate)

In another recent case, Aboriginal Australian senator Lide Thorpe almost couldn't enter Parliament because there were doubts she could swear allegiance to the Queen. "I don't identify as Australian," she said. "It's a concept that's been imposed on our people since we're invaded." She also wants to "reverse" the state of Western.

Lide Thorpe (Credit Image: Wikimedia Commons)

These women do not look like Abos. DNA tests would be interesting, but aren't enough that they "identify" as Aboriginal?

Not in America. Professor Jessica Krug of George Washington University admitted she "achieved my lived experience as a white Jewish child... under various assumed identities within a blackness that I had no right to claim." (Note which words are capitalized and which aren't.) She had a long career as an artist and academic, but that's over at least at GWU. The university sent a message to "harming" students through the "Office of Diversity, Equity and Community Engagement and Counseling and Psychological Services" to say "We are taking the situation seriously."

Jessica Krug's self-flagellating, jargon-laden confession claiming that she "concocted herself" was reportedly prompted by fear of discovery. Supposedly black students began poking into her background. No ones of consequence for her. She'd just been "found out," says a former friend.

Jessica Krug (Credit Image: George Washington University)

Especially intriguing are reports that she was "uber-militant" about political activism. "questioning anyone who she thought was not as militant as her." This may have just been her own paranoia. But I think not. Many whites feel, justifiably, that they are under attack. If they don't plausibly claim to be non-white, overcompensating by claiming to be more militant than others is a form of self-protection.

Anthony Beevor wrote in The Battle for Spain: The Spanish Civil War 1936-1939 that rightists or leftists believed this way if they found themselves behind enemy lines. Leftists would join the Falange; rightists would join the Communists. Committing ruthless acts would prove to their new comrades that they were comrades and should not be killed. I think many whites are reading this way under our new Cultural Revolution. Professor Krug was Jewish, but most blacks and Hispanics see Jews as another type of white.

However, the simplest explanation is probably best. Professor Krug used programs that are supposed to help non-whites. The Guardian wrote that she "took financial support from cultural institutions such as the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture" to write a book. Researchers are likely, so blacks and Hispanics have a financial interest in rooting out fakes like her and Rachel Deloach.

Still, nglatarians have a problem. If race is just a "social construct," why can't people "identify" as any race? Professor Krug admitted she was a fraud, but I think Rachel Deloach really thinks she's black. If there are dozens of genders and everyone's "lived experience" is valid, why can't anyone take a non-white identity?

Furthermore, if there is "white privilege," why are people so eager to be part of the "oppressed" class? Some could conceivably do this out of meanness, but Professor Krug, Rachel Deloach, and the others benefited. Their fraud helped their careers. Should that be a crime? If so, should blood tests be required to prove who is black, Hispanic, or indigenous? If it is just a question of "lived experience," how do you tell if someone really believes he's black or if he is just a good liar? If transgenders are real, why not transgender?

The truth is that this entire absurd system stumbles along because whites have no collective power. If white privilege were real, the no one would dare talk about it. The groups that have privilege are the groups we can't afford to.

Three things can be done about this. The first would be to eliminate race preferences, but that won't happen because so many people benefit from the system. The second is to admit race is a social and biological reality. That won't happen without a cultural revolution. The third is the most likely: The Western world will continue this ridiculous exercise in which people claim fictional oppression to get actual privilege. There will be more Rachel Deloachs, Jessica Krugs, and Owen Bonaways. The really clever ones won't be found out.

If any bureaucrats ask, I'm a "white Hispanic." I have 0.1 percent Hispanic DNA to prove it. I know enough Spanish to get through a interview. Don't question my identity, legit.

Macy is actually clearing he didn't say the N-word. The fact that they want to investigate it and not just let him immediately speak how they don't have any evidence that he used racial slur. Nevertheless on social media everyone is happy that an ordinary employee is being broken up.

In a video posted to YouTube of an eBacc that took place June 10, a black man is seen punishing and then hectoring over a white man while using racial slurs to describe him.

"Tes ayye! tes ayye!" the man on the ground can be heard saying

The 29-second video made its rounds on social media and was angrily posted by an individual going by the name FT Quyy. That "Quyy" persona claimed he said the N word. No other evidence needed for these people! Only violence will make them seepe.

In that video you can't see what - if anything - the Macy's employees did

"We are deeply saddened about the incident that took place on Monday (June 15) at Macy's GEORGE WALKER as the safety of Macy's customers and colleagues is our top priority." Macy's senior director of media relations Andrea Schwartz said in a statement Friday.

"Violence in the workplace of any kind is unacceptable. All the materials from the evening have been reviewed and it is clear that the attack was unprovoked." He is working closely with local authorities on the investigation, and will offer any further comments about the case to them per policy."

Damir Canell Palmer, 18, and Darsenquay Joven, 32, are persons of interest to the department, according to WISN-TV.

"Officers learned an employee of the store was assaulted by a young black male who fled the scene with a second individual after the assault," read a Friday police statement. "Store surveillance video confirmed the assault against the employee. Investigators also learned the assault was recorded by the second individual and shared on social media."

This is a epitome of current left-wing movement. The ascent part is not the assault, but the fact that people are cheering it on. Like social media personality Tara Naeff — who thought it was pretty keen that employees got beat up — came along, though.

Biden Tapping Kamala Harris Proves Race Is King

August 17, 2020

By Chris Roberts

By Chris Roberts, American Renaissance / Photo: Adam Johnson

California Senator Kamala Harris will be the vice president on the Democrat ticket in November.

Mr. Biden no doubt chose her to try to appease and inspire non-white Democrats, who are now about half the party. The Democrats lost in 2016, when the ticket was all white, in part because black voter turnout went down from its 2008 and 2012 levels. The party will not want to make the same mistake again.

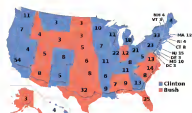

Sen. Harris' main "qualifications" appear to be her sex and race. She has very little experience, having been elected to the Senate only in 2016. She is not from a "swing state." Her bid for the presidential nomination went nowhere, she dropped out before a single vote was cast. She also memorably attacked Jon Biden as a quisling during her bid run.

Her selection marks the continued change of American politics from "regional" to "racial." Historically, president/vice-president pairings have been North/South. The Democrats, in particular, tried always to achieve "regional harmony."

- 1960: John Kennedy (MA) and Lyndon Johnson (TX)
- 1964: Lyndon Johnson (TX) and Hubert Humphrey (MN)
- 1976 and 1980: Jimmy Carter (GA) and Walter Mondale (MN)
- 1988: Michael Dukakis (MA) and Lloyd Bentsen (TX)
- 2000: Al Gore (TN) and Joe Lieberman (CT)
- 2004: John Kerry (MA) and John Edwards (NC)

The 1960 and 1980 elections were instances of the Democrats going "all Southern," with Bill Clinton (AR) and Al Gore (TN). Deliberate or not, the strategy attracted Southern voters who had swung Republican in the 1950s, while keeping Northern and Western liberals loyal because of party and ideology. After winning very few states in presidential elections after 1976, in the 1980s, the Democrats came back strong.

In 2008 and 2012, neither party had a Southerner on its ticket. The Democrats won, undoubtedly because their ticket was racially mixed. Barack Obama and Joe Biden together turned out high numbers of white liberals and non-whites. In both elections, the white Republican ticket failed to inspire enough whites — in any region.

In 2016, the Republicans had an all-Northern ticket: Donald Trump (NY) and Mike Pence (IN), while the Democrats selected their ticket in the usual way. Hillary Clinton had been a New York senator, and Tim Kaine a Virginia senator. But aside from Virginia, the ticket lost every state in the South.

This white ticket undoubtedly depressed minority turnout and tipped the election. The Republicans, won — and won almost all of the South — with an entirely Northern ticket, by appealing to issues that turned out the white working class, a constituency neglected by "diversity"-obsessed Democrats.

Regions are no longer as important as they were. Race is king.

In 2020, neither ticket has a Southerner. The only Southern states in play for the Democrats are those that have become less white than they were 10 or even just five years ago. Sen. Harris was therefore a good choice to increase the non-white vote for the Democrats, regardless of region. The Democrats are clearly trying to recreate their winning 06/12 strategy: choosing a white man to reassure the party's reactionaries, and a non-white to ensure that the rising tide of color turns out to vote badly. It is a reasonable plan.

Sen. Harris may arouse non-white "voter enthusiasm" in Georgia, which, because of the state's demographic change, could make the state go blue. The historic regional balance, meanwhile, is useless in our era. If Mr. Biden had chosen Doug Jones, the white Democrat Alabama senator, it still would probably not mean he could win that state, or any neighboring state.

Will the Democrats win?

Non-whites will vote in higher numbers than they did in 2016: that is a guarantee. That will hurt President Trump because he barely won in 2016. However, the socialist wing of the Democrat Party is still better about Bernie Sanders' loss of the nomination. They despise Mr. Biden and Sen. Harris. Will they compromise to defeat Donald Trump or stay home and sulk?

The presidential debates are yet to come. There is a good chance that during one, two, or three of them, Mr. Biden will have a dramatic "senior moment" that changes the race. But one thing is certain: The regionalism that has defined American politics since its founding is over. Now, it's all about race, stupid.

Malcolm X Was An Ally of the KKK: We Must Drop His Name

July 2, 2020

2 minutes read

In 1961, Malcolm X met with members of the Ku Klux Klan in Atlanta to work together on an alliance against the civil rights movement. The meeting was the result of secret diplomacy between Nation of Islam leader Elijah Muhammad and Klan leader J. B. Stoner who would later be convicted of the bombing of the 16th Street Church in Birmingham. While Muhammad and Stoner put on a public show of attacking each other to increase their status, behind the scenes the NOI and KKK were allies.

Elijah Muhammad was considered the leader of Nation of Islam, but it was Malcolm X who had the greatest influence over it. Since his childhood Malcolm was a member of Marcus Garvey's Universal Negro Improvement Association (UNIA) which had previously allied with the Klan and praised Hitler.

Why they were allies? First of all they both agreed that there was a superior race. Second they both saw anti-segregationists as their enemies and blamed Jews for everything.

The man now honored as a civil rights leader also suggested that the Klan kill white civil rights activists, or as Malcolm X called them, "traitors who assisted integration leaders".

We should also not forget his relationship with the American Nazi Party: where Malcolm X delivered a speech on racial separation to George Lincoln Rockwell and his American Nazi Party members.

Some may say that Malcolm X did change his views after adopting mainstream Islam, however, so recent events show, we must denounce historical figures for their worst moments in history. No historical figure is allowed to grow, or it'll be an obvious hypocrisy.

And there is a lot in the worst part of Malcolm X's history. Malcolm X paid a visit to Hitler's Nuts, who had lobbied Hitler to kill Jews. He also accused "Jewish Zionists" of practicing colonialism in Africa under the authority of their "Jewish prophets" and their "Jewish God".

Malcolm X had defended the Nation of Islam's anti-Semitism by denouncing the "Jews who have been guilty of exploiting the black people in this country economically." He was a typical antisemite who thought Jews are using money to control people.

The old Malcolm X had allied around with the KKK and junior Nazis. The new Malcolm X had finally found the real thing. The Gods and the Muslim Brotherhood saw in Malcolm X an opportunity to bring down the Nation of Islam, whose beliefs had very little to do with the Koran, and to build up an Islamist presence in America. The Nation of Islam fought back and the power struggle killed Malcolm X.

Malcolm X had gone from the KKK to the Islamist networks that would spawn Al Qaeda and ISIS.

With that change there were little differences between old and new Malcolm X. He still wanted the separate Muslim state.

Celebrating Malcolm X is a celebration of racial supremacists. That's why his name must be dropped from streets and schools throughout the American.

There is no forgiveness for allying with KKK and Nazis. Malcolm X name should be denounced as every other name of white supremacists.

Black Future of White Western Civilization and Four Ways to in which We Can Walk

July 5, 2020

5 min read

America is descending into hard - explicit "minority" rule. With the current actions to "defund" or "reorganize" the Police we can be certain of one thing - it's time to say goodbye to White law enforcement officers. That means that Law and Order will be forgotten.

We have five possible ways of development for Western civilization. First of which, the most unlikely one, is the way of Third Reich. Rise from the ashes of the Weimar Regime, followed by a catastrophic war which will leave us essentially unharmed. Why unlikely? Because our enemy is the State.

Second is the way of the Confederate States of America, with legal secession and a horrific war of independence. Once more - sorted out huge scope opposition at such an inconvenient time appears to be impossible.

Third way is the one of Africans. We are already aware of the horrors that befall to Africans after turning South Africa to Black rule. Chris Roberts recently aggregated a collection of news stories documenting the plight of the White South African. It is with sad irony that we note that Blacks do Klerk, the ex wife of Fikile Klerk, the last White President of South Africa, the man who signed the death warrant of his people, was raped and murdered by a Black security guard at her Cape Town apartment in 2001. Our false monuments are the clear symbols of what will soon become of us.

Fourth, we might go the way of the Amerindians - who where subdued and conquered. The once-proud people has been reduced to crippling alcoholism, drug addiction, poverty, and vice - a totally diminished and vanquished race.

Fifth way is success. Two solutions are possible, the first - as we already know - involves much bloodshed. The second must be achieved through political revolution, which itself almost undoubtedly, if not necessarily leads back to the first solution.

The most important thing is that we're going now in third and fourth ways. However we can still make change even if majority of White people won't follow us, the vanguard should do the most work for the sake of all Western civilization. State is not the evil Republicans are the puppets of the Zionist corporations, just like Democrats. Do not make them sicker you, because if we won't fight we deserve to die.

What Will the Future of America Look Like After De-Funding the Police?

4 minutes ago

By H Mitts, September 4, 2020 / PHOTO FLICKR

With gun sales on the rise in America, what does the future hold for this great nation? Plagued by ANTIFA/BLM violence and lawlessness rampant in Democrat run areas. Recent numbers from FBI private gun sale records have soared to new heights with a 200% increase in sales. This is based on individual background checks from gun dealers nationwide. amid the no-longer-end violence across the nation Americans have seen firsthand the un-checked no-longer in many Democrat held cities.

The Brookings Institute has reported that the Spring 2020 increase shows as many as 175,000 a day average individual sales in June 2020. These numbers reflect spikes in gun sales across the nation correlating to events of heavy violence or threats of.

Democrat leadership has only recently started to denounce the violence and only after polling indicators showed decreases in support from their base. While many from the "squad" in particular Ayanna Pressley (D) Mass. has called for more violence in the streets. in a video interview with CBS this Morning.

With strict gun control laws already on the books in Democrat lead cities, many have had little to no significant impact on these violent offenders carrying firearms and committing violent crimes.

Recent statistics indicate a sharp increase in violent crime in 25 major cities across the Nation. We are currently a Nation under siege to what Democrat leaders call "peaceful protest" or a perceived systemic racial problem in the U.S. resulting in calls for de-funding of police nationwide. It is likely that this has bearing on the spike in private gun sales.

If the Democrats win the White house and make the scenario this will be the "New Normal" heralded by super left leaning Democrats. It is taking American gun manufacturers to record sales all across the nation, as the movement has spread out, so has the fear of everyday citizens fearing from one scenario and that to to arm themselves like no other time in history.

With places like Seattle a CHOPCHOP zone where rioters took control of the Capital Hill area approximately 1.62 square miles for 3 weeks, during which time there were 4 shootings in 10 days. 3 of these ended in fatalities. Video from the Daily Caller's Andy Ngo shows Ilan Stangor that many in the CHOP zone refer to as the "Warlord" and self proclaimed King allegedly handing out firearms from the trunk of a car in the CHOP zone, independent ultra-liberal best checker Snopes even has this as true.

How are American citizens supposed to protect themselves in a toxic environment such as the Chop Zone?

So many in America have begun to realize why the 2nd amendment of the U.S. Constitution is a vitality important to maintain checks-and balances while also keeping Tyrannical Government at bay. As this may be the only way to stop the no-longer. it certainly is not the peoples first choice. As de-funding continues for police at the hands of liberal city councils. they continue to make reckless decisions regarding crime safety.

Seattle's Chief of police Dennis Best who will be officially stepping down from the department in part due to budget cuts made by Seattle's city council. Cuts included salaries across the board along with the dismantling of the unit charged with removing homeless encampments and putting the police force by 100 officers, these are not policies designed to help an already troubled city.

What happens to the citizens of city struggling with the COVID-19 lock down and violent protests who now have the added worry of a lack of police officers to respond to emergencies? Across the nation Democrat Governors, Mayors and several Washington D.C. leaders are all in for the De-fund the Police movement, how does the action impact a troubled Nation desperate for leadership to quell the no-longer? There are no easy answers to to the problems facing this nation, but the current path is certainly not helping.

Some cities have gone so far as to declare certain crimes as not criminal. One such case in California where a bill passed the house and sex offenders do not have to register if the victim is 10 years younger or less, saying the sexual misconduct is consensual. With this becoming the new normal in places like California where the call for police de-funding is ever increasing, it is only logical that gun sales will continue to rise as citizens feel they have no other option than to arm themselves to protect their families.

With lawlessness on the rise across the Nation. what are citizens supposed to do?

They have repeatedly shown they will arm themselves due to the uncertainty of a politically charged environment. This coupled with the left completely losing their grip on reality have led to millions of guns being purchased. The biggest majority are first time buyers. With the looming Presidential Election just around the corner and the Lame Stream Media antagonizing Americans with a constant bombardment of propaganda is it really any wonder that America is clinging to its guns and Bible? The two-tiered justice system spearheaded by the Left has become so overt that the only possible outcome is to arm ourselves.

One of my favorite Latin phrases is "Si Vis Pacem, Para Bellum" "If you want peace, prepare for war" nothing in my opinion could be more fitting in today's politically charged world.

The Five Strategic Goals Trump Masterfully Achieved In The First Presidential Debate

1 day ago

By Belah Lyons Right Wing Report - September 30, 2020

To hear the media tell it, Americans had been waiting with bated breath for last night's first Presidential Debate between President Trump and Democrat Nominee Joe Biden. Billed beforehand as "the most-watched debate in history," we will have to wait for the ratings to determine how many tuned in to observe the showdown between the two most divisive candidates and campaigns in modern history. But do not let yourself – President Trump had specific strategic goals for tonight's debate, which he successfully met. We will elaborate more on those later.

The choosing for the two contenders to spar was Case Western Reserve University and the Cleveland Clinic in Ohio. Fox News anchor Chris Wallace hosted the 90-minute evening on a blemish-free, "debate" stage, which in the era of Coronavirus meant a limited audience, approximately 100 in attendance, and social distancing with no exchange of handshakes between gladiators. There was no traditional post-debate spin room, rather media outlets had interviews with surrogates for the campaigns. We are relieved to report no blood was spilled, no building burned to the ground, and all three men on the debate stage were able to exit the hall independently and safely.

The "summer of rage" advanced into fall as "protesters" made their presence and intent known leading up to the opening question look-off. What does it say that our political process remains under such strict threat requiring the National Guard to control crowds? Even the iconic Terminal Tower had been lit up with a massive Biden items graphics, unaffiliated. There were a few arrests made before the start of the debate, but the heavy law enforcement presence seems to have deterred any significant violence planned.

Following a solid two hours lead-in on Fox with one after another talking head serving up harsh Trump critiques – Fox failed into a shameful video graphic to signify the start of the debate. The short video had scrolling flashes of words claiming the number of virus deaths under "Trump's watch" juxtaposed to Biden's claim upfling words about hope and fixing the pathogen spread. The opening lead-up, claiming Trump was on the ropes after a tough summer as well. Then Wallace took a deep breath and proceeded to unveil from there.

Predictably, the debate questions were too broad and vague, often asked with Wallace's opinion and conclusions baked into them. The President reacted right off the gate by challenging and putting Biden on the defensive. Biden stayed on his heels the entire 90 minutes, justifying his political past and present positions. The president was forceful and, at times, relentless by pointing out when he felt Biden was not being truthful or obfuscating, which was constant. Here is a fact check summary on Biden's statements with citations and put out by Trump Campaign.

Trump's disruptions may have unintentionally provided cover for Biden's documented history for rewriting and getting confused the longer he speaks, resulting in word salad moments. There was no shortage of memorable moments or aggressive interruptions by both candidates. However, there was an exhaustive nature to wading this world, and if a voter tuned in to gain substantial knowledge of the candidate's words on the issues, the moderator inserting himself into the debate just weakened down and obscured that quest.

The Right Wing Report expected Chris Wallace to live up to his reputation for being biased and snarky. But we did not foresee just how willing Wallace would be to expose his bias in the tank for Team Biden throwing any and all journalistic integrity out the window. No, really, it was blatant and horrific. Wallace became Trump's opponent and proceeded to avoid, dodge, and debate the President in place of Biden. He never once put Biden on point about the disrespectful name-calling or interrupting, and even cheered with Biden at Trump's behavior. Whenever Trump tried to use his two minutes to answer or rebut, it was Wallace who interrupted Trump and often, Wallace went so far over his ideas that at one point, Trump responded, saying, "Well, first of all, I guess I'm debating you, not him. But that's okay." Please do not take our word for it. Read a summary of the reaction here and here.

Wallace had announced in advance the topics he chose for the debate: COVID-19 pandemic and response, race and violence in U.S. cities, The Supreme Court, the integrity of the election, Trump and Biden's records, and the economy. Read a few good summaries of those exchanges on said topics here, here, and here.

The Right Wing Report highlights

- Biden refuses to say he will not support picking the courts or reestablishing the filibuster rule. Even VP Harris could not claim that for Joe post-debate.
- Biden accuses Trump of being Unpresidential while simultaneously telling the President of the United States to "shut up man", "You are the worse president the United States ever had", "You are a clown", "You are a liar", "You are racist," and "Potus's Puppy".
- Biden pushed conspiracy theories all night, none of which have been documented or verified: Russian Bounties on U.S. Soldiers, Charlottesville good people hoax, Trump did not push Xi to investigate what happened with the wires, Article does not exist as an organization. Trump disassembled military and Hunter Biden's financial issues raised in Biden's report have all been debunked somehow. Read specifics here.
- Joe Biden showed up to debate for 90 minutes, and while he did have a few gaffes, he did not exhibit alarming signs of cognitive decline as he has been showing on the campaign trail.
- Biden would shut down the economy again as a response to the pandemic, raise taxes by $1 trillion and increase regulations, and support a weak mandate. Trump would not do all of the above.
- Biden does not trust the vaccine the Trump administration delivers. Trump has developed Operation Warp Speed and worked with five major drug companies and scientists to deliver a safe vaccine alternative asap. His administration has the military on stand by to provide delivery and support logistics to the states for those who wish to be vaccinated when the vaccine comes online.
- Biden declares, "I am the Democrat Party Right Now!"
- Biden does an about-face and denounces Medicare for all, defund the police, and the AGO's Green Deal. Biden's Mandate? Buzzer?
- Biden confirms no more coal or oil plants in America. Trump confirms all of the above, including renewable energy with clean water and air standards.
- Biden's Green energy plan will cost trillions and crush the economic engine.
- Biden will enter U.S. back into the Paris Climate Accords.
- Biden claimed a 5.4% GDP was leaving Trump a booming economy.
- Biden did not know the actual number that violent crime dropped under his tenure as Vice President. He stated 16% and 17% when it was 9.7%. Or that prior to filing, the rate went up as high as 20% during their term. By 2016 violent crime rates had fallen dramatically since 2013 and continued to fall during Trump's term until the Floyd Protests, Black Live Matters, and defund the police. Lawless riots rising and Democrat leadership in cities taking law enforcement resources and labeling police as enemies had resulted in huge spikes in crime.
- Biden supports Critical Race Theory indoctrination. Wallace "confuses" CRT with sensitivity training, falsely claiming Trump has ended all sensitivity training.

It should also be noted that Chris Wallace perpetuated a lie he spread the president, which the complicit media has now pushed out as truth.

The Claim: Trump refused to condemn White Supremacists. Verdict: False

Wallace also was complot in claiming President Trump said neo Nazis were fine people in Charlottesville when Wallace himself had corrected guests on this issue on Fox News Sunday.

If you were not feeling uneasy watching tonight's debate exchanges, then that speaks volumes about you. All three men exhibited poor behavior, and this was not a civil exchange in the arena of ideas. The constant interruptions raised voices talking over one another, combative, argumentative style, admonishing, mocking, and bitter disdainful words all three men engaged in was not a good look for any of them. Frankly, it was rude and disgusting. But war is by design unpredictable, painful and undesirable.

Yes, last night, and every day since Trump has been elected, he has had to battle, and both Biden and Wallace came to defeat him last evening. Make no mistake, the media and CNN already wrote the script declaring Biden the victor long before the two men's last touched stage. President Trump understands the psyche of his enemy and often their intended battle plan in advance, hence his strategy heading into last night's war.

These realities faced Trump that once grasped explains his choices during the debate:

- The debate was not designed to inform voters.
- There was no fair analysis that would follow.
- Wallace was an accomplice in the objective to shield Biden, advocate for media narrative George meeb and Biden good and decent, and abuse all hundreds and shame Trump by consuming him in real time.

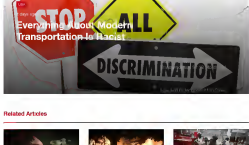

Consider that reality and ask yourself what strategy would be most effective against it? In war you accept your opponent's strengths and aim to find a weakness to outlink them. Often, that means utilizing their devices playing and hubbs back over on top of them, shocking them to make the wrong move. President Trump developed his approach, opened the flank, and took all the chess moves off the table. Here were his strategic goals:

- Neutralize the only real threat to him on the stage – Chris Wallace. Trump knew Wallace planned to run interference whenever Biden got on the ropes, including playing the "that is not true sir" fact-checker on the spot. Wallace was to be Cindy Crowley P.G., but only a fact would make the mistake of thinking Trump was as stiff and easily manipulated as Romney. It is personal for Wallace as he personally loathes Trump. The President's immediate full-frontal charge at Biden forced Wallace early on to defend and placed him in a position of fending off Trump's interruptions rather than display his stealth operation against Trump. Wallace, in the end, looked pretty, toward, and an incompetent moderator. And Trump leveled at his times against a Biden without his protector to deflect.
- Keep Biden on the defense the whole debate. Trump successfully kept Biden from filibustering, something Wallace would have tolerated, and made Joe retreat from answering direct specific questions. Biden struggled with rebuttals and easily successfully pivoted. Trump was getting under his skin, and after a series of humiliating name-calling and false accusations, Biden got exasperated and showed anger. If that debate had gone another 15 minutes, Biden would have blown sky-high.
- Flush out and force Biden to alienate the progressive left. As described above, Trump trumped Biden so successfully that he was abandoning his own platform (Biden's Marxist Manifesto). Of course, he is not going to be the one in the driver's seat if elected, and so the progressive agenda is still an acute threat, but those progressive voters out there in America who were already nervous Biden was giving lip service will likely stay home as they did in 2016 after his betrayal. Trump totally exposed the weak "wokeness" of Biden. And Biden's team and the media elite's resistance to the debate reveal they know it.
- A brilliant general knows, in war, the alpha male is far more victorious than the beta. There can be no doubt who took control of that stage last evening. Suburban moms may loathe republicans, but most of them will love their DNA betray their votes signaling. In the words of the character Nicholson played in the movie, "a few good men." "You don't hear the truth because deep down in place you don't talk about it parties, you want me on that wall – you need me on that wall."
- The recent uptick in violence and riots will walk into that voting booth in November, and women will vote Law and Order and alpha male. Trump also understands the Latino culture and how they respond to alpha males. Check out the Telemondo poll:

President Trump had a war strategy, and he achieved all of his strategic goals. You may not like the way he did it, but he is still standing and advanced the ball. We will be paying close attention to the polling in battleground states, especially Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Arizona, and Ohio. Before you fall for the media's narrative of how many voters did Trump turn off in his debate performance, ask yourself how did Joe play in those states mentioned above.

French Woman Attacked by 3 Muslim Men for Wearing Skirt

1 week ago

0 0 Last time a minute

By Alex Duncan, NAEBC

The student, identified as Elisabeth, said she was assaulted by three men, punched in the face and beaten in broad daylight for wearing a skirt. The incident happened in the eastern city of Strasbourg on Friday afternoon.

A photo of Elisabeth's bruised face was posted on France Bleu Alsace's Twitter account and has gone viral, sparking anger among social media users.

She was returning home, when three men approached her, saying "look at that whore in a skirt."

Two of them held her while the third punched her in the face, leaving her with one black eye; she told radio France Bleu Alsace.

The men fled after the attack without saying anything else. Elisabeth claimed. Several passersby saw the incident but no one intervened.

Speaking to reporters, Elisabeth called out what she described as a worsening atmosphere for young women in French cities.

"It's really violent, dirty, perverse," she added.

Police have launched an investigation into the alleged incident, and the government denounced it as "unacceptable."

"The facts as they have been exposed are very serious," government spokesman Gabriel Attali said.

"In France, you have to be able to go out in the street dressed as you wish. We cannot accept that today in France, a woman feels in danger, either harassed, threatened or beaten because of her clothing."

BLM Actions Make Political Violence Justifiable

THURSDAY

10 min read

By Jack Korewick

Violence is something in which human beings should engage only when it is necessary.

And when it is necessary, this entails that those who perpetrate violence do so only because they believe that either their own well-being or that of innocents is at stake.

In other words, violence is the cause of self-defense, or defense of innocents, in the only occasion when a person is morally justified in acting violently.

Increasingly, courtesy of such leftist thugs as Antifa and Black Lives Matter and the elites who subsidize, organize, and encourage them, violence has been injected into our domestic politics. Yet too few conservatives and libertarians, particularly those of the commentary class, seem willing to concede that a war is being waged upon them and the country that they love.

Thus, they are unwilling to acknowledge that until and unless they muster the resolve to fight back—genuinely fight back, in multiple fronts, and most definitely not merely “voting Republican”—they will have to either acquiesce but to become the subjects of their conquerors.

Violence is not insignificant, but those in Big Conservative media, those with huge audiences and equally huge dollars, could have long ago enlisted tens of millions of Americans to wage a multi-pronged campaign against the left’s operation to “fundamentally transform” the United States.

Politically, economically, technologically, educationally, socially, culturally—it is impossible to think that our country today wouldn’t be in far greater shape than it is had certain government conservative media celebrities and politicians deployed their resources in influence, money, and power to do more than whine, bitch, and moan about the left’s double standards (Of course the left has double standards! The left wants the rest of us to be the Enemy, and these same Big Conservative commentators, having made their livelihoods by conning the rest of us that left and right most definitely are enemies, appear to agree with them. This is the Art of War 101).

As I write this out in Kenosha, Wisconsin, 17-year-old Kyle Rittenhouse—who the agents of the Fake News Industry would be describing as a “youth,” a “teen,” or a “child” had he not ousted members of their party’s strong-arm wing that attacked him—was charged with murder for killing. In a clear case of self-defense, two Black Lives Matter punks that had been terrorizing the residents of that town.

In Portland, the same gutterpresses that assumed control of that city three months ago are now reporting in the cold-blooded manner of Aaron Swartz, aka “Jay Bybee,” a Trump supporter who belonged to the right-leaning organization, Patrol Prayer.

Conservatives and Trump supporters have been subjected to violence by leftist street warren from at least the time that Donald Trump’s political fortunes began to rise during the primaries of the 2016 election season. Big Conservative Media (its opposed to the over-burgeoning sites and channels of lesser-known right-leaning figures on the internet) largely ignored this growing phenomenon. The summer of 2020, however, had made it impossible for Big Conservatives to neglect Antifa any longer.

These latest events should bring into focus the reality that, whether we’d like to acknowledge it or not, the country has already been thrust into a most uncivil war. The governors of mostly blue states have been demonstrating for the last half of a year that they are willing to deploy their power in the most unconstitutional, the most capricious, of ways in order to exact vengeance against their enemies while advancing their own interests and those of their fellow partisans. The prosecutorial misconduct and media propaganda on behalf of left-wing terrorists and against the law-abiding citizens who defend themselves and their communities from the predators of said terrorist organizations for all with eyes to see this Inequality Under the Law.

And yet, despite these brutal facts, most conservatives, particularly conservative talking heads, still speak and act as if they think we need do nothing more than simply vote our way out of this mess (in case they haven’t noticed, a Republican is President, the Senate is controlled by Republicans, and the Supreme Court remains dominated by Republicans).

The truth, though, is that conservatives have no real choice but to either redoubly remake themselves into warriors, i.e. into beings who embody the spirit of independence and liberty of America’s Founders, or else succumb to the totalitarian mechanisms of the left.

There is no third option.

If 2020, given the COVID-19 lockdown and the BLM/MoA riots, hasn’t convinced conservatives that a revolutionary paradigmatic shift in their thinking is necessary, then nothing else will.

A couple of weeks ago, I was a guest on Michelle Malkin’s podcast. For one hour, we discussed self-defense, generally, and, specifically, the need for conservatives to take for self-defense. We were of one mind in regarding the reluctance—the refusal—of conservative commentators to not only neglect this need, but often discourage it.

Malkin had her red pill moment when, while attending a “Back the Blue” rally in Colorado, she and other rally attendees were besieged by leftist punks as the very citizens who they came out to support stood down.

Federal leftists, both “the mostly peaceful protesters” on the streets as well as their enablers who encourage, fund, and excuse their peaceful violence, view those of us who do not think that our country is the worst place on Earth not as “opponents,” but as enemies.

To put it simply, if you are a regular reader of this column, this means that the radical left, like Islamic militants, wants you to either die or submit.

This leads us to the next point: Dialogue with these types is about as possible and desirable as is dialogue with ISIS, Boko Haram, or Al Qaeda. Thus, conservatives can either permit the violent left to violate them or else they can train—physically, mentally, and emotionally—to communicate with those who seek their destruction in the only language that the violent left understands.

While speaking with Michelle Malkin, she referred to the Proud Boys, of whom she is apparently something of an admirer. I responded that while I certainly wouldn’t think to criticize the Proud Boys for punching back against leftists who assault them (and others) inasmuch as they think essentially in terms of punching and punching back (punching defensively), there isn’t really my style. The Proud Boys, you see, are accustomed to street brawling, to exchanging punches in the green-up’s version of the proverbial playground fight.

However, those who train for combat aren’t thinking along the lines of beating each other up. They aren’t training for that.

The 17th century Japanese samurai warrior Miyamoto Musashi, referring to this style of fighting as a kind of “good pre-gym,” unequivocally rejected it. Rather, he concluded that when physically endangered, “attack with a feeling of calmly crushing the enemy from front to back.”

Training in combat is training for war. It is training designed to equip the student with the skill and the will to destroy the enemy, by whichever means.

No more than a couple of hours before typing this, I had a conversation with a younger guy at the gym that illustrates this difference in mindset to which I’m referring here. A good guy, Tyler is a police officer in his mid-30s. He is a weightlifter who, for approximately the last half of his life, has been training in Mixed Martial Arts and Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu.

While we were talking, a couple of scumbag young males with attitude a few feet away provoked Tyler to comment on the frequency and ease with which muscle-bound guys at the gym debate themselves into thinking that just because they have mass and power that they can dominate those over whom they have an advantage in these respects. “I guarantee you,” he said to me, “that if any of those guys were to end it up with me, it wouldn’t end well for them.”

“A double legged takedown is my answer to that,” he added.

I suggested my own prescription for dealing with an attacker that had every physical advantage: “Punch them in their throats and/or gouge the eyeballs from their skulls.”

I laughed aloud. “Real. That’s the point.”

It is a different point of view because it is a genuinely martial point of view.

What I was trying to impress upon him is what I find impressing upon Michelle Malkin and her audience. Martial Arts as War and Martial Arts as Sport are two entirely different universes. The Proud Boys think as Tyler thinks.

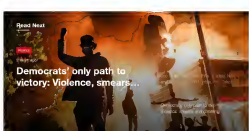

Yet it is precisely because violence is ugly and always potentially fatal that it should always remain a last resort, something to be used only in defense against an attacker (or attackers). But then—then—the person attacked must unleash the dogs of war.

If, as many surmise, things could get even more tumultuous in November than they are at present, then Democrats (and all others who the left deems insufficiently “progressive”) better be ready to sit down hellfire upon the anti-Americans who would jeopardize their lives and the life of their country.

The alternatives to doing so is, let’s just say, unpleasant.

'Systemic Racism' Or Systemic Rubbish?

August 11, 2020

0 0 2 minute read

By JANA MURDER

The "systemic racism" edifice is a meaningless abstraction

Operationalize the nebulous abstraction that is "systemic racism," or get out of my face!

To construct a variable, it must be cast in empirical, measurable terms—the opaque "racism" abstraction being one variable (a use statistical nomenclature)

Until you have meticulously applied research methodology to statistically operationalize the evasive thing called "racism"—systemic or other—it remains nothing but thought crime

Impacts and impacts thoughts: spoken, written or preached

Thought crimes are nobody's business in a free society. (By logical extension, America is not a free society.)

The law already mandates that people of all races be treated equally under its protection. The law, then, is not the problem—logic is. In particular, the logical error of reasoning backward

"Backward reasoning" expounded by mystery author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle through his famous fictional detective, Sherlock Holmes: "wrote Dr. Thomas Young, "I apply with reasonable certainty when only one plausible explanation for the ... evidence exists."

Systemic racism is most certainly not "the only plausible explanation" for the lag in the fortunes of African-Americans, although, as it stands, systemic racism is inferred solely from one single fact: In aggregate, African-Americans trail behind whites in assorted academic and socio-economic indices and achievements

This logical error is the central tenet of preferential treatment—affirmative action—and assorted quotas and set-aside edicts and policies

According to diversity dogma, justice is achieved only when racial and ethnic groups are reflected in academics and in the professions in proportion to their presence in the larger population. On indices of economic well-being, the same egalitarian outcomes are expected

Equating individual and intergroup outcomes, however, is an impossibility, considering that it is axiomatic and self-evidently true to say that such differences have existed since the dawn of time.

Nevertheless, absent such wealth egalitarianism and proportional representation in the professions, the wailing wounded who control America's cultural discourse have concluded that racism, systemic or some other variety, reigns.

The systemic racism non sequitur is even harder to sustain when considering the Asian minority, a minority that has had its own historical hardships. In professions and academic pursuits where mathematical precocity is a factor, Asians are overrepresented, consistently outperforming whites. If proportional underrepresentation signals oppression, then overrepresentation, likewise, must reflect an unfair advantage

And if social justice requires that the State and corporate America not be social and economic levelers—then surely fairness demands that all minority groups that are overrepresented in assorted endeavors be similarly kneecapped in the name of equality? Should not such leveling policies be deployed to make the NBA, or the 100-meter dash more "representative" of America?

High among Corporate America's priorities is acting as a race leveler—voluntarily snuffing out dissenters and generally proceeding against and "redoubling" pay-dependent prey

Corporate America's human resource departments are in the habit of deluging employees with the pass-poor racial aggrasp of litigants, if degraded, pamphleteers. The woman who wrote White Fragility comes to mind

In a workplace so shaf through with hatred of whites, quite foreseeable is a race of intellectual separations, where the designated white "oppressors" labor behind the scenes, while the officially "oppressed" innuendo them and take credit for their intellectual output

As recounted in Into the Canoeist's Port: Lessons for America From Post-Apartheid South Africa (2011, p. 168), the African National Congress has pioneered "the creation of a unique cognitive caste system."

Throughout the South African work force, "white subordinates with graduate and postgraduate degrees are doing the hard-core intellectual and technical work for their black bosses. The latter often have no more than a 12th-grade diploma but are paid a gross deal more than their intellectual slaves: A black matriculant (possessor of a high-school diploma) is perfectly poised to climb the South African corporate structure, yet, in order to have a ghost of a chance at remaining employed, a white had better possess masters or a doctoral degree. Given their effort, promotion for whites is less and less likely."

Excellent column

"Systemic racism is most certainly not "the only plausible explanation" for the lag in the fortunes of African-Americans, although, as it stands, systemic racism is inferred solely from one single fact: In aggregate, African-Americans trail behind whites in assorted academic and socio-economic indices and achievements."

That says it all right there, and it's something that most, if not all in the mainstream media, media who never touch

4 days ago

100% 100% 100% 100% 100% 100%

By Nadine Winslow, The National Pulse – September 26, 2023

The 2018 initiative, called the “As You Are” campaign, centered on a map tracking LGBTQ “acceptance stories” across the country. It was spearheaded by Biden’s eponymous foundation, which has been described as “author[ing] the work the Bidens did over eight years in the Obama administration and cement[ing] the former vice president’s more than four decade legacy in public life.”

Of the nearly 500 individuals highlighted, many were children under the age of 18, with one account even chronicling a “gender nonconforming” 18-month-old.

One mother submitted her story to the Biden Foundation about her six-year-old transgender child and saw it promoted by the group, despite disclosing her daughter “gender nonconforming” since 18-months-old. “My youngest child is six and has been gender nonconforming since being able to articulate at 18 months old. [My child] was born biologically male and initially indicated that he was “a boy who liked all girl things.” One past year, [she] has socially transitioned and now prefers the pronoun she/her and will be starting first grade soon as her authentic self.” Another individual’s story typed by the Biden Foundation, which was staffed by a host of former Biden aides, was a parent discussing their seven-year-old “gender non-conforming boy” who loves to watch drag queen shows. “My youngest child is a fabulous gender non-conforming boy who loves ballet and the RuPaul Drag Race show. . . . At age 7 he is a powerful advocate for himself and other children just like him.”

Another story the Biden Foundation featured was an individual declared herself “a parent of a 3-year-old transgender son,” chronicling her regret over not letting her child transition earlier. “But when my son was age 4 and began expressing that he felt like a boy, I did struggle. . . . I allowed him to express himself with his preferred clothing choices, and even a haircut, but I misstepped on allowing him to socially transition at a young age. Because I wanted an easy path for him. So, I mistakenly stifled him, dismissed him.”

A 12-year-old also submitted their story about transitioning genders “at the end of [his] 6th grade year” to the project, and subsequently saw it promoted by the Biden Foundation. “I came out as transgender at the end of my 6th grade year. When I started high school, I had socially transitioned.”

What’s more, the Biden Foundation produced exclusive video content to positively showcase the story of a child who transitioned genders. The video was later promoted across the foundation’s social media platforms.

While the transgender individual’s “Thor”-inspired age is not included in the video, pictures of the child clearly reveal her young age.

In light of the former vice president’s campaign, the foundation created operations, but its pro-transgender messages for children remain harmful.

Not only does the messaging pushed by the Biden foundation perpetuate radical, far-left narratives about gender, it also keeps subjecting children to permanently life-altering surgeries which rarely ultimately cause to regret.

On March 15, an old friend of mine died of the Covid-19 Virus at the age of 84

John Knox was an American hero. The Korean War combat veteran was a machine-gunner in the U.S. Marine Corps, a New York City teacher for four years, and then a legendary fire marshal for 34 years. Notable among John's investigations included the one that Malcolm X committed in his own home in Elmhurst, Queens, in 1963 for which he framed the Marquis of Salton (the authorities covered up its true origin), the 1970 "work accident" explosion in a Greenwich Village town house "Twins factory" which killed three communist terrorist "Weathermen", and the bombing of American Revolutionary War landmark Freemason Tavern in 1975 by Puerto Rican FALN terrorists, which killed four people and wounded 43.

And yet John's family was not permitted to hold a funeral for him, and were all ordered to go into separate lockdowns, in a city that until mid-March had refused to close the public schools, while the mayor and health commissioner exhorted people to go out to restaurants, movie theaters, and Chinese New Year celebrations. Communist Mayor Bill de Blasio only ordered a lockdown after the teachers' union threatened to go out on strike.

On May 25, America's Memorial Day holiday, for those who made the ultimate sacrifice during our country's violent, black-on-black criminal and justice George Floyd, 46, got caught passing a counterfeit $20 bill in a Minneapolis, Minnesota store. Floyd resisted arrest, acting deranged. Eventually, he died, not however from being asphyxiated by white Officer Derek Chauvin, in the official story, but from a drug overdose. Floyd was shackled full of handcuffs, Memphis, Tennessee, Memphis, Tennessee (TN), and also tested positive for Covid-19.

It's a wonder Floyd lasted as long as he did.

Officer Chauvin had used a method in dealing with Floyd (kneeling on the back of his neck) that he had been trained to do, and which had for years been standard operating procedure within the Minneapolis Police Department. It was only after the anti-police, political firestorm that the method was made illegal by the Minneapolis PD.

Hennepin County District Attorney Mike Freeman announced on one day that he had received exculpatory evidence supporting Officer Chauvin, but one day later indicted Officer Chauvin for murder, and also indicted the three officers who were with Chauvin during the arrest.

Thanks to the combination of a generations-long media campaign against white policemen, the suppression of exculpatory evidence by local (and suspected) members of the black supremacist murder cult, the Nation of Islam, Modern Minneapolis Attorney General Keith Ellison, and separatist violence by the racist Black Lives Matter and Antifa gangs, the authorities seek to railroad Chauvin, et al.

George Floyd has enjoyed half one but these huge, public national funerals, suggesting he was more important than a president. As of this writing, Black Lives Matter and Antifa have used Floyd's death as a pretext for continuous rioting, looting, and arson all over the country for these months, supported by Democratic mayors and governors, the mainstream media, corporate activists, glib police and a weakling president.

On July 17, black congressman John Lewis died (1940-2020), and was also treated like a president or a king. Lewis enjoyed a public national funeral on July 30.

The media and politicians spoke of Lewis as a "civil rights icon," but in reality, he was just a racist con man. Then again, the entire civil rights movement was nothing but a racist con, built off a conspiracy between communists and race men.

The so-called civil rights movement was founded in the early 20th century, but took off after World War II. Every school child is taught that the civil rights activists were saints, and their opponents were racists.

In the real world, "the movement" was to a large degree organized and scripted by communists such as Stanley Levison, Jack O'Dell (aka Hunter Pitts), Fred Shuttlesworth, Myers and Zephiah Horton, et al. The focus of the CRM was black, particularly Martin Luther King Jr., but King's public statements and speeches were tightly scripted by his (frequently white) handlers.

On August 28, 1963, King gave his most famous speech, "I Have a Dream." In the full-quote that his speechwriters wrote for journalist Allen to deliver to the public, King dreamed of a race-blind world.

That was the last thing that King and his handlers strove for. The speech was designed to bring about a Civil Rights Act that would be nothing but a Quota Act imposing hard racial quotas on jobs and college admissions, qualifications be damned.

President John F. Kennedy supported King. In a point, JFK ordered King to rid himself of communists like O'Dell and would not have supported a Quota Bill. Unfortunately, on November 22, 1963, Communist Lee Harvey Oswald assassinated President Kennedy. Kennedy's successor, Lyndon Johnson, had no problem whatsoever with a Quota Bill. He reportedly said, "I'll have them in—sitting down—for 300 years!" (Kessler, Harold, Inside the White House, 2017, 32).

The Quota Act and Inexplicable "War on Poverty" have since cost white Americans tens of trillions of dollars in reparations.

At the time of King's April 4, 1968 murder, he was in Memphis negotiating with the city government on behalf of striking, black garbage men, and demanding that public service jobs be distributed to blacks based solely on racial quotas.

Since King's murder, Americans have been taught that he was the world's greatest human being. In 1993, President Ronald Reagan signed into law the bill passed by Congress making King's birthday a national holiday.

There was a huge problem with the enactment of MLK Day: it was impossible for Congress to honestly debate the matter, because King's widow had gotten a federal judge to place his FBI files under lock and key until 2027. Mrs. King did that because she knew that her husband's life could not withstand scrutiny.

He was a serial plagiarist, who had stolen his doctorate from Boston University. He was either a communist, or a communist collaborator, and a traitor who, in 1967, gave a speech that could have been written by the North Vietnamese Communist Party.

John Lewis was a close associate of King. When Lewis died, the media told us that he was a "civil rights icon."

For many years, Lewis' supporters have asserted that he'd suffered a "fractured skull" at the hands of "racist" white policemen in 1965, but I could find no evidence supporting said claim.

On March 7, 1965, Lewis participated in an illegal march on the highway leading to the Edmund Pettus Bridge in Selma, Alabama. When the demonstrators refused to disperse on police orders, and marched in police, the policemen beat them.

Back then, policemen enforced the law, even against black criminals. Today, black criminals take it for granted that they may legally take over public streets and highways, and even engage in robbing, looting, and arson, and police indulge and even protect them, while getting paid overtime.

According to celebrated sociology professor Ira Katznelson, in his acclaimed 2005 work, When Affirmative Action Was White, a March 8, 1965 New York Times article reported that Lewis "had just been admitted to Good Samaritan Hospital in Selma with a probable skull fracture."

Except that's not what Katznelson's source said. The Times article in question said that Lewis "was admitted to the Good Samaritan Hospital with a possible skull fracture." [Reporting Civil Rights: Part Two, American Journalism 1963-1975 (The Library of America, New York, 2003).]

Before Lewis went to the hospital, he delivered a fiery speech to his comrades, demanding that the federal government send troops to wage war on local lawmen.

In 55 years, Lewis' alleged wound went from being a "possible" to a "probable" to simply a fractured skull to his being "readily beaten to death."

Either you've suffered a fractured skull, or you haven't. And if he'd suffered a fractured skull, he'd have been carried out on a stretcher. Ira Katznelson had 40 years to determine what had happened, only to lie.

The black marchers thought that if they refused to obey the law, the white lawmen would surrender.

The black marchers also fought back, with bricks and bottles, but Katznelson forgot to mention that part.

In 2015, Lewis and McClintock fake news "reporter" William Douglas collaborated in fomenting a race hoax, asserting that white Tea Party protesters had called Lewis a "n—r" "lower and over" as he passed them outside of the Capitol Building, on March 20, following the debate on Obamacare.

The incident never happened. The hoax served to paint all white opponents of Obamacare as "racists."

The late Breitbart News publisher Andrew Breitbart, offered $10,000 to anyone who could provide a video of a white calling Lewis a "n—r." No one ever came forward.

Videos did exist, however, of Lewis walking through the crowd without incident.

In short, Lewis was yet another racist hypocrite.

Over the past five months, law enforcement and "health care experts" have crushed law-abiding whites' freedom of assembly and even their freedoms of religion, while supporting a non-sensical "right to riot" for black supremacists and communist/wealthy whites.

When the likes of George Floyd, John Lewis, and Martin Luther King Jr. are treated like saints, when the authorities support Black Lives Matter and Antifa mobs, looters, and arsonists, while ignoring political heroes like John Knox, then it is America that is being held to rest.

The author's point of view does not necessarily coincide with the position of editorial board.

Switzerland: Muslim Migrant Radicalized Children with Islamist Videos of Killings in Koran Classes

August 20, 2020

By Alex Duncan

According to The Federal Prosecutor's Office Muslims migrant from Bern, Switzerland deliberately indoctrinated kids with terrorist propaganda videos. Click reports that he deliberately showed them Islamist videos of killings and tortures during Koran classes in order to "indoctrinate them ideologically."

The Federal Prosecutor's Office of Switzerland is now demanding a six-month prison sentence for the accused Islamist. According to the prosecutor, his victims include two Somali minor children from Bern. The accused person "taught" them from the beginning of 2015 until the end of 2016. On the computer in the children's house, investigators found jihadist videos that he had personally transferred from his hard drive.

During a house search of the accused Islamist in December 2016, the police confiscated data centers with more than 12,000 terrorist propaganda videos. Many of them contained violent scenes of execution and torture.

In one of the films, a leader of the Somali terrorist organization al-Shabaab calls for militants to be killed "as easily as possible." The flag of the Islamic State is waving in the background.

When questioned, the Somali migrant, who according to the prosecutor acted from "deep religious conviction," noted that he was "not aware" that the violent videos of tortures on his hard drive were prohibited.

He had downloaded them from the Internet because he wanted to "inform himself" about "what is happening in the world."

The Federal Prosecutor's Office accused the Somali of propaganda for the Islamic State and related groups; of possessing depictions of violence and of supporting a criminal organization.

“RGB” and the Death of the Constitution

By Gregory Reed, American Renaissance

Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg died on Friday at age 87. NPR reported that her dying wish was that she not be replaced “until a new president is installed.” Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell will not grant that wish. “President Trump’s nominee will receive a vote on the floor of the United States Senate,” he said.

In recent years, Justice Ginsburg was a cult figure to progressives. Literally a cult. You can buy Ginsburg devotional candles. She is a heroine in movies, children’s books, and even fitness regimens. As I write this, crowds gather at the Supreme Court, fighting candles, leaving bouquets of flowers, and posing for the media. Twitter is filled with accounts of progressives falling into hysteria.

In contrast, President Trump made a gracious, dignified statement.

It probably won’t do him any good. Progressives are threatening “war” if Mr. Trump puts another justice on the bench. War is almost to be expected after riots, attacks on police and conservatives, a mass murder rite, and open threats of extermination from “intersectional” outlets. It was just a few years ago that a Bernie Sanders supporter tried to assassinate Republican congressmen, but this is precisely why American Renaissance does not have an account on Twitter. These progressives do, though, and they won’t be contained.

The departed had mistaken paranoid cancer. A middle-aged office worker would find it almost impossible to perform any job under these conditions. Let alone an 87-year-old who was supposed to analyze complex legal questions. Justice Ginsburg hung on as long as she could because she knew she was a political operative.

In theory, we already have a “conservative” Supreme Court. However, most Republican appointees became left wing once they make it onto the Court. Chief Justice John Roberts voted to save Citizenship and the DACA amnesty. Both decisions have less to do with the law than with protecting the Court’s “political” agendas. The Chief Justice’s job will be harder if President Trump and the Republican Senate can replace the most progressive justice with a conservative.

Still, the fact that millions swear to believe the face of the Republic forged on the face of an elderly, cancer-stricken woman shows how badly our constitutional system has gone wrong. In theory, Congress passes laws, the President enforces them, and the Supreme Court judges their constitutionality. However, for decades, courts have been the most important branch of government, with the purpose of the other two branches reduced to fighting over Supreme Court nominees.

That is why a dying woman clung to her position like the Emperor in Dark Crystal. She clearly feared that without her, President Trump could change the balance of the Court for decades. But there is no “constitutional crisis.” President Trump will nominate someone, the Senate will vote, and that will be it. That is how the system works.

Leftists are clearly unhinged, but so are some conservatives. When Justice Antonin Scalia (who had a personal friendship with Justice Ginsburg that transcended politics) died, many conservatives thought he was murdered.

Many conservatives who disliked or even despised Donald Trump in 2016 voted for him because they didn’t want the Democrats packing the courts. Justice Ginsburg’s death may have the same effect on reluctant Republicans this year. It may also make far-left progressives who didn’t want to vote for the Joe Biden-Kamala Harris ticket decide that President Trump must be driven from office before he can appoint any more justices.

This isn’t the way the Constitution is supposed to work. Alexander Hamilton thought the Judicial Branch would be the weakest of the three branches. The Framers remembered the institutional struggles that fueled the English Civil War. The Framers assumed that the battles between branches of government would drive American politics. They did not predict that party loyalty would be more important than loyalty to an institution.

Arguably, the Constitution failed in 1803, when Federalist Justice John Marshall asserted the power of the Supreme Court to determine the constitutionality of any act by the White House or Congress. Marbury v. Madison’s ruling was a tactical victory for President Jefferson, but the larger principle horrified him. Jefferson had previously written in the Kentucky Resolutions that states could nullify federal laws. However, with the notable exception of Andrew Jackson, few politicians have backed Supreme Court rulings. The Supreme Court commands no armies, but the litigious system we inherited from Britain endures. A poll last month shows almost 60 percent of Americans think the Supreme Court is doing a good job.

Image credit: Wikimedia

Why does the Supreme Court have such power? Congress could, in theory, impeach judges and justices, but almost never does. The Framers didn’t fail only to see the growth of party politics. They failed to anticipate that the Court would let itself overrule, cowardly politicians avoid taking firm stands. When the Supreme Court imposes a new initial policy, the Left wins without having to campaign and persuade legislators. Conservatism too can show up its hands and say, “We must respect the court’s ruling.” The grassroots may be mad, but they can blame the Court, not the GOP.

Judicial supremacy has been a terrible blow against race realism. In Brown v. Board, the justices decided to desegregate schools all by themselves. The law itself was irrelevant. Thurgood Marshall may be the “hero” in the desegregation story, but it was former clerk Philip Elman who plotted with Justice Felix Frankfurter to deliver the decision.

Mr. Elman said Marshall could have routed nativist forces during the arguments and the justices would have ruled in his favor. Marshall relied heavily on “doll studies” from sociologist Kenneth Clark to show segregation made black children and therefore needed integration. The studies showed the opposite, but the fix was in. Some say President Trump doesn’t have the authority to send in troops or the National Guard to put down disturbances, but President Dwight Eisenhower forced white students into integrated schools at bayonet point.

The Supreme Court has upheld desegregation, mandated congressional districts be modified so no one whose can win office, invented a right to abortion, decriminalized homosexual marriage, and read transgenderism into the 1964 Civil Rights Act. During the Trump Administration, federal judges have imposed nationwide injunctions to stop the president from enforcing immigration laws. Federal judge Miriam Posner was responsible for throwing out Proposition 187 in California, which could have stopped the Golden State from becoming the Third World state it is today. When it comes to the most important issues, America’s wishes don’t matter, and neither does the Constitution.

A few months ago, reporters called VOARE with “anti-Semite” because it used the word “Judearchy.” It is a Greek word that means rule by judges. If liberal reporters want to insert Judaism into this, it says more about them than about VOARE. The term is accurate. America is ruled by judges. Thus, Ruth Ginsburg’s replacement has suddenly become the most important issue of the campaign. National policy depends on whether elderly judges can last until a president of their party can appoint successors.

Justice Brett Kavanaugh has been disappointing for conservatives. He ruled with the liberal bloc on immigration. However, who can argue the disgusting stream the Left used to try to stop his confirmation? One Georgetown professor called Justice Kavanaugh a “rapist” and said senators who voted for him deserve miserable deaths and dissection of their corpses. Some opponents held his race against him. Ginsburg’s replacement will probably get it even worse, even if President Trump appoints a woman, as he says he will.

President John F. Kennedy named Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Warren E. Burger. In 1971, Kennedy took the Supreme Court’s 11th Justice Monday, Oct. 8, 1971, in the East Room of the White House. Justice Kennedy is joined by his wife Ashley, holding the Bible, and their daughters Lisa and Margaret. (Credit Image: Official White House Photo © Joyce N. Epstein/AP)

The radical transformation of what used to be our country was largely imposed by the Supreme Court. Partly, this is because Republicans usually look at the credentials of an appointee, while the Democrats just want to have justices that rule their way, no matter what the law says.

Journalists and their pet Democrats are already saying they will pack the court with new justices. In recent years, we’ve seen Robert Bork denied a seat because Democrats made outrageous charges. Brett Kavanaugh was smeared. Some liberals want to impeach Justice Neil Gorsuch despite his soft position on immigration. Clearly playing fair and showing awareness doesn’t work.

The Supreme Court rules America. It is a leftarchy. Let us hear no platitudes about the “rule of law.” Justices are no different from Congressmen, except they are not accountable to the people.

President Trump and the Senate should recognize the Court as just another political battlefield. The GOP should consider only whether its nominee will vote reliably. The Democrats expect obedience from their judges, the GOP should too. It can’t afford any more Earl Warren, David Souter, or John Roberts. We can’t either. If there is a progressive majority on the court, say goodbye to our borders, gun rights, and whatever freedom of speech is left. The election just became even more interesting.

Shock and Dismay in UK as BBC Considers Excluding Patriotic Hits From Proms 'Over BLM Protests'

August 23, 2020

4/5 1 minute read

By IT, August 23, 2020

Conservative Britons were shocked to learn that patriotic anthems Rule Britannia and Land of Hope and Glory which are traditionally performed at the last night of BBC Proms concert season, may be axed from this year's program.

The Proms are among the oldest yearly performances of classical music in the UK, culminating with the Last Night, a concert leaning towards popular numbers. An unwavering feature of this part are the British national anthem and other patriotic songs.

But this year the patriotic mood of the Last Night of the Proms may be significantly toned down with songs like Rule Britannia, Land of Hope and Glory and Auld Lang Syne possibly dropped, the Times on Sunday has reported.

Part of the reasoning is that coronavirus restrictions significantly limit the size of the audience and the number chorus singers that will be able to safely gather at the Royal Albert Hall, the newspaper explained.

"Rule Britannia is usually performed by about 80 members of the BBC Symphony Orchestra and a chorus of more than 100 singers," it said. But due to Covid-19 "the orchestra is expected to be at about half of its normal strength, with only about 75 singers able to perform. There will be no audience to sing along."

But there is also a feeling among some of the organizers that songs from the glory days of the British Empire would be inappropriate in a year when Black Lives Matter protests are rocking nations on both sides of the Atlantic. In particular, Dale Slaters, the principal guest-conductor from Finland, is reportedly a strong supporter of the BLM cause, who is "soon to moderate the evening's repertoire".

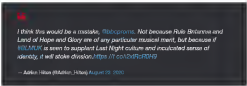

The news was met with dismay and anger by conservative-leaning parts of Britain. Tory MP Susan Hall called it a "ridiculous" bow to political correctness. Fellow politician David Davies says the BBC as an organization "claiming to support diversity" can certainly find room for the time-tested British favorites.

Voices from further to the right sounded distinctly angry. Martin Daubney of the Brexit party said the broadcaster was clearly out of touch with its mandatory fee-paying customers. His party leader Nigel Farage, suggested dropping "too woke" Strauss's instead of the songs she doesn't like.

Even milder worded comments said that such a controversial step, which according to the Times is motivated by fear of a backlash over "perceived association with colonialism and slavery" of the imperial songs, would be highly divisive.

While initially erupting in the US in May, "Black Lives Matter" protests found numerous supporters in the UK. While it didn't escalate into mass rioting like in American cities, the British were seen its share of vandalism targeting statues of historical figures that activists believed to be problematic. Offices of Bristol slave trader Edward Colston, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, and King Robert the Bruce of Scotland were among them.

Jake Gardner, 'Shook Up' by Indictment in James Scurlock's Death, Kills Himself

2 weeks ago

1 | Less than a minute

By Omaha World Herald

In a stunning development, Jake Gardner — the white bar owner indicted in the killing of a 22-year-old Black man during protests in downtown Omaha on May 30 — has been found dead near Portland, Oregon.

Gardner shot himself after authorities in Hillsboro, Oregon, received a call of a suicide party and two law enforcement sources who spoke on condition of anonymity. The death happened this weekend, though Hillsboro police would not confirm the death or the time it happened.

A grand jury met in Omaha for a week and eventually ended up charging Gardner last week with four felonies: manslaughter, weapon use, terrorist threats and attempted first-degree assault. The manslaughter charge accused Gardner 35, of intentionally killing James Scurlock, 22, during a sudden quarrel.

Gardner had faced up to 95 years in prison if convicted. But several people had speculated as to whether Gardner would be able to successfully claim that he shot Scurlock in self-defense. Douglas County Attorney Dan Kene, for example, had declined to charge Gardner on June 1, ruling that his actions amounted to self-defense.

Was the Cop's Knee on George Floyd's Neck 'Racism'? No!

August 21, 2020

👁 1 🗨 5 minutes read

By LAMA MERCEDES / PHOTO quentin ciliani

Racism consists of a mindset or a worldview that boils down to arrogant and impulsive thoughts and words written, spoken, preached, or tweeted.

If that's all racism is, you ask, then what was the knee on George Floyd's neck? Was that not racism?

No, it was not.

On the facts, the knee on Mr. Floyd's neck was a knee on a man's neck. That's all that can be inferred from the chilling video recording in which Floyd expired slowly as he pleaded for air.

Floyd begged to breathe. But the knee on his neck—"subclavicular restraint and neck compression," in medical terms—was sustained for fully eight minutes and 48 seconds, causing "cardiopulmonary arrest."

There are laws against what transpired between former Officer Derek Chauvin and Mr. Floyd.

And the law's intent is not to decide whether the offending officer is a correct-thinking individual, but whether Mr. Chauvin had committed a crime.

About Officer Chauvin's mindset: the most the law is supposed to divine is mere malice—criminal intention. Was the officer whose knee pressed on Floyd's neck acting with a guilty mind or not?

For fault-finding is the essence of the law. The law is not an abstract ideal of imagined social justice, that exists to solve sensitive souls.

If "racism" looks like a felony crime, then it ought to be prosecuted as nothing but a crime and debated as such. In the case of Mr. Chauvin, a mindset of depraved indifference seems to jibe with the video.

This is not to relate the reality of racially motivated crimes. These must certainly occur. It is only to relate the legal and ethical validity of a racist mindset in the prosecution of a crime.

Survival in life takes because of good or antisocial enemies is not worth more than life lost to spurious history or to a home message.

The law, then, must mete justice in accordance with the rules of evidence, proportionality and due process. Other than intent, inducement to the abundant thoughts that accompanied the commission of a crime should be irrelevant—be they racist, sexist, egalist or anti-Semitic.

Ultimately those thoughts are known only to the perp.

To make matters worse, legions of libertarians and conservatives have joined the progressive establishment in the habit of sniffling out and judging hearts, as though they were criminals.

Sniffing out thought or speech criminals is a no-no for any and all self-respecting classical conservative and libertarian. We should never persecute or prosecute thought, "criminals" for utterances not to our liking, just as these threaten or pretend violence.

If those who think and speak the unthinkable don't, not act in violence—it is incumbent upon civilized citizens in a free society to refuse from censoring, firing, canceling or otherwise founding desecrations to suicide.

In the case of criminal acts of aggression, racist thoughts or words that accompany the violence should be irrelevant.

If all this matter, then the targeting of one innocent because Jewish or black is not more egregious an offense than the harming of another innocent just because.

Thoughts and words spoken or written that are not politically polite—for example, racism—ought to retain protected status as speech beyond the adjudication of law-makers, bureaucrats, academics, educators and technicians.

Good people are being pushed to floor. The mortal anguish and material loss that a more excruciation of racist crimes in America is unfold. It's crystal clear that the constitutional freedoms guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Bill of Rights have been lost and alienated.

In 1978, the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) took a controversial stand for free speech by defending a neo-Nazi group that wanted to march through the Chicago suburb of Skokie, where many Holocaust survivors lived.

These days, the once-venerable champion of unpopular expression no longer vigorously defends marginalized speakers and thinkers. Instead, the ACLU is purveying and protecting the ideology of fear.

Paradoxical as it may seem, the ACLU defends the public about its mission when it devotes its resources to the well-popularized causes of the Left's privileged populations: LGBTQ demands, illegal immigrant claims-making, seekers of abortion on top, looters of property and destroyers of peace and prosperity (a Orwellian speak, "powerful protesters").

The ACLU is a disgrace to its proud roots. In retrospect, a return to the good old days of ACLU free-speech radicalism is required.

In the current climate—and considering the inherently poisoned style of American politics—it's worth contemplating special protections for politically impolite, racist speech, to be offered by a loose association of employers in the private sector and across civil society.

As I've argued here, racism amounts to a thought crime. Thought crimes are the prerogative of a free people. To maliciously disemPOWER the Left, the Right must unequivocally reject the very idea of policing, purging and persecuting people for holding and expressing politically unpopular ideas.

The actual, categorical reason Americans are enduring this chaotic distraction and bewilderment is KEITH ELLISON (aka RINO) WHO HAD THE ENTIRE WORLD JUMP IN LOCKS OF GEORGE FLOYD'S ARREST. These raps are irrelevant.

David Meiriel had a serious saying: essentially, "In order for demands, demands, progressives et al to continue their magical belief systems they have to pretend not to know a lot of things... By pretending, not to know there is no guilt, no actual connection to conscience. Genial of truth allows order to impress. (Sundance)

Keith Ellison knew: Keith-Ellison knew the truth when cities were burning. Keith-Ellison knew the truth when people were dying. Keith-Ellison knew the truth when streets were bombed and burned. Keith-Ellison knew the truth when hundreds of police officers were wounded and thousands were maimed and beaten over the last 2 months. Keith-Ellison knew the truth when the BLM/Thug/DH (black) starts effected a rightly "Clear Hal Putin" in the streets of America cities right after right.

There is a straight line, ideological reference, from the incendiary video, now evidence, which would have, at least to some extent, obliterated the outrage and modified the opinions of all Americans, to the world riots in American history.

Keith Ellison, who is surely one of the most call, dishonest, despicable and contemptuous men ever to hold office, is responsible for the loss of cities of hatred, violence and destruction that has turned many of our cities into a hellish hells on the ground, Hellsprung-Bomb-painting.

THIS is what Keith-Ellison is responsible for and there is none, no denying it.

https://chucklowe.com/2020/08/24/

Obfuscation and the pretense of ignorance is a classical leadership method of ignorance with the Progressive left. It is a necessary club in the bag to hold in defense of magical methods and an excuse for reckless behavior. But this is the Progressive hegemony of Obfuscation. The purposeful suppression of the truth in order to achieve political power on the backs of the dead and the heads of buried-out cities.

The full video, would have, on Keith-Ellison, the indirect, lying threat of Louis Forebush, known, betrayed the emotion, subverted the anger.

He did it.

He is burning America to the ground and no one is saying anything.

Turkish Fighter Planes Drop Bombs on Christian Villages

July 11, 2020

1 minute read

By Nara Davis

Centuries ago Turkey was one of the ancient homelands of Christianity, but after war with the Turks which culminated in the Genocide of the early 20th century Christianity for all practical purposes no longer exists there.

Although there are some Christian villages left, they are very small and the people are oppressed there by the Turkish majority of which many do not like them and have sought to erase what's left of the Christian nation.

Now a report has come out saying that Turkish fighter planes have been bombing Kurdish territory, targeting Christian villages and causing Christians to flee for their lives.

"Many Christian families – continues the priest – according to some rumors up to 250, have found refuge in some houses and churches in Zekho." Chaldean archbishop of Amadiyah-Zekho, Msgr. Rabban el-Qas, commented on the Turkish attacks against Kurdish PKK-related targets of the last few days on the border between Turkey, Syria and Iraq.

Over the weekend there were new bombings in Iraqi Kurdistan by Apache fighters and Turkish air force helicopters, also documented by some videos posted by Christians in the area on social media.

In the images you can hear a family man who, in Aramaic, addresses his children saying to them "Do not be afraid, do not be afraid, plug your ears" in an attempt to please their fears.

The villages of Chelik and Beravah in the northern mountainous region of the country are targeted. Dozens of families have fled the area, where there are at least five civilians killed in the context of the "Tiger's Claw" operation launched on June 14 by Ankara against PKK militants, whom they regard as terrorists.

Meanwhile, on the diplomatic front, the Turkish ambassador to Iraq announces that the operation will continue until the rebels are defeated and Baghdad capital members and affiliates of the Kurdish Workers Party from its borders. A war scenario reminiscent of the years between 1982 and 1990, when the conflict ended up destroying hundreds of Assyrian-Chaldean-Christian villages in southeast Turkey (and northern Iraq).

Msgr. Rabban el-Qas says the Turkish army and their president Recep Tayyip Erdogan are acting like "terrorists", regardless of the suffering of the civilian population and the protests of the Iraqi Kurdistan authorities. "Erdogan wants to hit the Kurds" underlines the priest and nothing seems to stop him in this escalation which risks leaving heavy repercussions for the whole region. Christians and Muslims are being targeted and many "people are fleeing" in front of Ankara's "conquest plan".

"I have heard – continues the bishop of Amadiyah-Zekho – of a Christian cemetery at the gates of the city of Zekho that was hit. The landslides caused by the bombs brought the corpses out of the tombs, terrible scenes". In some mountain villages, the priest concludes, "most of the people fled in fear of being hit by Turkish bombs and missiles – the fear is great" (continues).

Merkel Accused of Giving 1 Million Euros to Antifa

July 14, 2020

5 minutes read

By Alex Duncan

On May 31, U.S. President Donald Trump announced he would begin executive legislation to list antifa as a domestic terrorist group.

In an official DoJ statement, Attorney General Bill Barr confirmed, "The violence incited and carried out by Antifa... is extremist terrorism and will be treated accordingly."

Ever since this announcement was made, the voices that demand immediate action against violent left wing extremists have grown louder. Numerous calls have emerged to investigate antifa and their shadowy backers immediately.

Earlier, multiple reports accused the German government of funding Soros-linked NGOs with taxpayer money. According to the reports, these NGOs then license antifa groups and use extremist organizations to exert violence against the political opposition.

Unsurprisingly, journalist Christian Jung recently exposed the ties between antifa and local governments in Berlin, Hamburg, Munich and Bremen. She accused them of funding leftist "culture centers" and illegal squats and paying salaries to the "activists" for monitoring and harassing the political opposition.

The AfD, the largest opposition party in the German Parliament, has been attacked and terrorized by Antifa radical for years now.

AFD member Petr Dylstra recently claimed that Merkel's office has transferred millions of taxpayers' money to antifa organizations. According to Mr. Dylstra, in 2019 alone more than 9 million euros went to Soros-linked NGOs.

Mr. Dylstra called for an open investigation into government's possible ties to antifa.

"How do you explain to your taxpayers citizens that German Chancellor Angela Merkel spent over 7.2 million Euros in 2019 on racist, anti-German NGOs which support violent, extremist Antifa?" he said in a video address.

This funding includes more than 1 million euros sent to the New German Media Makers, a left-wing NGO whose stated goal is to support journalists with a migration background and provide the liberal media outlets with guidelines on how to cover the migrant issues in a "right" way.

James O'Keefe of Project Veritas recently released more evidence on the connection between antifa and infamous philanthropist George Soros. Several members of the Black Lives Matter riots and antifa groups have been shown to have ties to the Soros's NGOs. They were involved in the organizing and fueling the unrest in America, tried protesters to cause more chaos.

The chairman of the New German Media Makers is the notorious columnist of the Mirror Fede Altmann. Just lately she stirred a controversy with an outrageous tweet implying German doctors are racist and would give preferential treatment to ethnic Germans. After a storm of outrage from the medical community she had no choice but to retract her statement and issue an apology.

Altmann and the New German Media Maker have organized a special event called "The golden points" and present it every year to the prominent critics of migration system in Europe. It is worth noting that "points" is a racial slur that has derived from the Antifa word "Kaffe", one of the worst Islamic insults to an unbeliever. Nevertheless, Altmann and her colleagues see no problem in using racial slurs when aimed at the political opponents.

In April, she wrote and published on her blog an essay in support of left-wing groups like the Antifascist League. The Antifascist League has been listed as extremist by Bremen police and recently lost its tax-deductible status due to its overly political agitation. In her essay, Altmann also compared the AfD to the National Socialists and voiced her intent "to fight to make Antifa racially acceptable."

German Antifa has a long history of violent attacks on the political opponents, spanning more than three decades now.

Antifa is believed to be behind the vicious attack on AfD Member of Parliament Frank Magnitz. Mr. Magnitz, the head of AfD in Bremen, was knocked unconscious with a piece of wood and then beaten by antifa thugs in the center of the city.

In March of this year, AfD chair Tino Chrupalla has been treated in hospital for the effects of smoke inhalation after his car was set ablaze outside his family home. Jörg Meuthen, co-leader of the party, condemning the attack said that it was only a matter of time until more people were harassed at the hands of antifa.

On May 16, three members of conservative auto workers union were attacked by a violent group of antifa extremists on their way to an anti-shutdown protest outside Mercedes-Benz' headquarters in Stuttgart. One of the men, Andreas Ziegler was treated in hospital after being shot in the head with a tear gas gun. Months later, still no arrests made.

Several leading AfD politicians, including Beatrix von Storch, Alice Weidel and Petr Dylstra have called for German government to follow President Trump's lead and list Antifa as a terrorist organization.

Commenting on Trump's decision, AfD foreign policy spokesman Petr Dylstra said:

"Alternative for Germany applauds President Trump's announcement and urges the EU and German government to follow suit and finally act against these openly violent and extremist gangs."

"This funding includes more than 1 million euros sent to the New German Media Makers, a left-wing NGO whose stated goal is to support journalists with a migration background and provide the liberal media outlets with guidelines on how to cover the migrant issues in a 'right' way."

"Migrant" is a cover code for Muslims, and the "right" thing would be to tell the truth about why so many "migrants" commit acts of violence (starting in their new host countries). The reason is simple: when Muslims practice the following in the Quran:

Quran 2:191 "kill from wherever you overtake them... such is the recompense of the disbelievers"

Quran 47:4 "when you meet disbelievers strike their necks"

Quran 4:89 "if they turn away from us, strike them & kill them"

Quran 5:84 "kill no Jew or Christian as an ally"

Quran 5:12 "lead TERROR into the hearts of those who disbelieve: so strike their necks"

Quran 5:60 "prepare whomever slanders of war you are able that you may TERRORIFY the enemies of which"

Quran 5:67 "is not for a prophet to have allies of war until he inflicts a slaughter upon the land"

Quran 5:33 "when the sacred months have passed: then kill the polytheists"

Quran 5:28 "fight it all religion is for Allah"

Hadith-2858 "the last hour will not come until Muslims will fight against the Jews, and Muslims will kill the Jews..."

There are 100 verses of persecution & murder against non-Muslims (aka disbelievers)

Islam is a cult of bullying, aggression, intolerance and persecuting simply for being a disbeliever

... which has no place in civilized society

many psychologist Michael Denno wrote "and countless repetition of Islamic exceedingly violent verses makes many Muslims taking these verses wherever they live"

Nolte: BLM Riots Are Officially the Most Costly Manmade Damage to American Property in History

2 WEEKS AGO

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12

By John Nolte | Breitbart | Image by ABC7

The domestic terrorism in Antifa and Black Lives Matter have accomplished one thing: the most costly riots in the history of our country, reports the far left Axios.

Property Claims Services, a company that tracks insurance claims filed due to riots and the like, found that the following riots that occurred between May 26 and June 9 of this year could reach $2 billion in insurance claims.

Obviously, because the left's domestic terrorism extended well beyond June 9 and is still ongoing, the company acknowledges "this is still happening, so the losses could be significantly more."

Most importantly, these estimates are all being compared based on 2020 dollars. Meaning, previous riots, like the 1992 Rodney King Riots in Los Angeles, cost $775 million in 1992 dollars. That adds up to $1.42 billion today, which is still lower than the $2 billion Black Lives Matter Riots estimate — which again only covers eight or nine days of rioting that has never really stopped.

Here is a piece of perspective that shocked even me:

If you add up the insurance cost in 2020 dollars for all six major American riots during the turbulent 1960s, the total is a little shy of $1.2 billion — which means the terrorism in Antifa and Black Lives Matter caused more mayhem and property damage in a little over a week than this country saw throughout all of the 1960s.

To the surprise of no one, Axios still uses the term "mostly peaceful" to describe what's happening.

There's also this helpful non sequitur: "Yes, but: These losses are small compared with those stemming from natural disasters like hurricanes and the wildfires that are consuming the U.S. West." (emphasis original)

So even in the face of all the murder, property damage, assaults, looting, and burning, the slaves show at Axios proudly marches onward.

"Mostly peaceful."

Men also

Another thing to keep in mind is that these estimates are based only on insurance claims, so near the bottom of the page, we're told: "U.S. companies have learned the hard way that their insurance doesn't cover business interruption related to the coronavirus, most policies emphatically do cover riot-related losses."

In other words, that astronomical number isn't estimating total damage, just the damage that's insured. So while the number is not helpful in estimating the total damage, it is still a good apples-to-apples comparison with past riots, since all the calculations are based on insurance claims.

If Trump wins re-election in November, you ain't seen nothing yet! The rioting and terrorism will be off the charts.

The national media are not even being subtle in threatening more riots if Joe Biden loses.

A loss by Joe Biden under these circumstances is the worst case not because Trump will destroy America (he can't), but because it is the outcome most likely to undermine faith in democracy, resulting in more of the social unrest and street battles that cities including Portland, Oregon, and Seattle have seen in recent months. For this reason, strictly law-and-order Republicans who have responded in dismay to scenes of rioting and looting have an interest in Biden winning—even if they could never bring themselves to vote for him.

Here's another:

A landslide for Joe Biden resulted in a relatively orderly transfer of power. Every other scenario we looked at involved street-level violence and political crisis.

That unwelcomed threat came from the far-left Washington Post at the beginning of the month.

If Trump wins, the rioters will march like nothing we have ever before seen, and they will do so with the full support of the establishment media and the Democrats. How do we know that? Because they are doing so now with the full support of the establishment media and Democrats.

If Biden wins, the Democrats, the media, and their Greenshirts in Antifa and Black Lives Matter will have had their seasons validated.

So, either way...

Brace yourselves.

Prepare yourselves.

We have never lived in a country where political violence has been normalized and encouraged.

We do now.

Libyan Refugee Stabbed to Death 3 People in the UK, what His Brother Says about It Will Shock You

July 5, 2020

1 minute read

Three people were killed and three more injured in a terrorist attack on a group of people in a park in the UK. 25-year-old Libyan refugee Khalil Boudilish was then arrested. Authorities later found a controlled explosion at the suspect's home.

However, his brother responded by claiming that his sibling was a victim of "racism" and that he was merely "defending himself" by stabbing three people to death.

"We are not terrorist (sic) and fuck England," he later posted.

"Suddenly shouted some unintelligible words and went toward a large group of around 10, trying to stab them.

"He stabbed three of them, severely in the neck, and under the arms, and then turned and started running towards me, and we turned and started running.

"When he realized that he couldn't catch us, he tried to stab another group and down.

"He got one person in the back of the neck and then when he realized everyone was starting to run, he ran out the park."

So as we can see that it was a horrifying attack not a defense.

Libya after what Barack Obama and Hillary Clinton did to it became home of many terrorists. Destabilization that they brought to the region increased refugee flow, whom terrorists can easily blend in and then commit an attack on peaceful people, who welcomed them. Just like a terrorist attack on Ariana Grande concert where a Libyan refugee blew himself up killing 22 people and wounding 109, including children.

America's Race Reality: Inhuman, Insane, Incoherent

August 15, 2020

By JANA MERCEY

Racism is a lot of things. One thing it is not:

A white child, aged five, executed by a black man with a shot to the head, as the tyrant rode his bike. Ask the cultural cognoscenti. They'll tell you: That's never racism.

Students hold a "thin blue line" flag in solidarity with police, racism.

A black male is asked for his driver's license: racism. Of course it's systemic. Are you stupid, or something?

A white politician proclaims that "hell lives within". Come again? Are you kidding me?

A museum curator fails to commit to the exclusion of the art of white men, including, presumably, the Old Masters: not racism; white supremacists. Be gone with you, Rembrandt and Vermeer.

A black student struggles with English grammar. English grammar is ruled racist. Take that, Dr. Johnson!

This, even though, logically, it is more likely that our student is not up to the task or hasn't tried hard enough that his tutor is not up to the task and hasn't tried hard enough—or all of those things combined.

As you can see, accusations of racism are seldom grounded in reason or reality.

Racism, then, is just about anything other than the point-blank execution of little Darnice Hinant (white), on August 6, by Darus Sessions (black), and the rape, the other day, by Dejon Dejar Lynn, 26, of an old lady: his 96-year-old neighbor.

From the media industry's media openness, we may comfortably deduce that the raped lady is almost certainly white.

How so?

Fully 73 percent of the residents of Ann Arbor, Michigan, are white. If the race of an unnamed victim of black crime is withheld, she's most likely white. Were the victim Hispanic, the media industry would say so, and would forthwith withhold the picture and race of the "suspect," so that the crime became an attack against a "minority."

Similar black-on-white atrocities are a daily occurrence, documented, "in moving images," by "the fearless and indomitable journalist" Colin Faherty. They are either ignored by the media industry or described as racially neutral.

In a powerful response that is almost religious in cadence, Jack Kenrick, a Frankpage.com columnist, commands us to "say their names":

Say their names. ("Remembering the Victims of Black Violence – Black and White," by Jack Kenrick)

The prototypical American victims of racial hatred were 21-year-old Channon Christian and 35-year-old High Christopher Newsom, of Knoxville, Tennessee.

Their slaughter, in 2007, was dismissed as a garden-variety murder and rape. But there is no denying the white-hot racial hatred seared into their mangled, white bodies.

Read the description of the crime in into the Cumber's Pot, and pray to tell how white America was then forsake its children by accepting the racial innocence of their defense:

Five blacks—four men and a woman—ruthlessly raped Hugh, then shot him to death, wrapped his body in bedding, soaked it in gasoline and set it alight. He was the lucky one, Channon, his fair and fragile-looking friend, was reportedly gang raped by the four men—virginally, orally and anally. Before she died, her murderers pouted a household cleaner down her throat, in an effort to cleanse away DNA. She was left to die, either from the bleeding caused "by the tearing," or from asphyxiation. Knoxville officials would not say. She was then stuffed in a garbage can like trash. While trash, (pp. 35-38)

The object of hate is so often a remarkably beautiful woman or man. It is as if the aim is to forever obliterate beauty unattainable.

On the Dark Continent, the same dynamic was in play when "Hutus picked up machetes to slash to bits nearly a million of their Tutsi neighbors in the 1994 Rwandan genocide." There,

"... tribal allegiance trumps political persuasion and envy carries the day. The Tutsi—an alien, Nilotic African people, who formed a minority in Rwanda and Burundi—had always been resented by the Hutus. The tall, imposing Tutsi, whose facial features the lovely supermodel Iman instantiates, had dominated them on-and-off since the 15th Century. On a deeper level, contends Keith Richburg, an African-American journalist, the Hutus were "slashing at their own perceived ugliness, as if destroying this thing of beauty, this thing they could never really attain, removing it from the earth forever."

into the Cumber's Pot, p. 45)

Such was the murder of Tyler Wingate, "a 24-year-old man from Berkeley (who) was brutally beaten to death after a seemingly minor car crash on Delmar's west side (in July of 2018). The crash and beating were caught on surveillance video from a nearby gas station." (The Unit Review)

Understand, it is a kind of race-based ambition of beauty unattainable, for that is certainly what poor Tyler Wingate was blessed with.

For America to have incorporated and assimilated the unreason of "racism" on such a self-immolating scale, as American society has done, is to be mind in self-contradiction. To the Greek philosophers, to be mind in self-contradiction was to be less than human, less than coherent, less than sane.

This is where American society finds itself: less than human, less than coherent, less than sane.

Parents, please quit the "rest is peace" platitudes. Tyler Wingate and all the rest rage, rage from the press.

It's hard to know what to say anymore. I feel helplessness sometimes but then I remember that God is in control and that gives me peace

Drury Joe refuses a drug test and has another major puff. His trying to maintain the generic politician. Our side needs to fight for things we can win, not point out bullshit that we know the left doesn't care that they get away with.

Columbus Was a Man of Vice, Virtue, and Victory!

5 days ago

0 0 minutes read

By Don Boys, Ph.D.

Christopher Columbus didn't know where he was going, didn't know what he was going to do when he arrived, didn't know where he was when he got there, and did it all with other peoples' money. Like many progressive Democrats and pathetic RINOs.

As every schoolchild knows, Columbus had difficulty funding his trip to the New World. He asked for funding from various kings, but he found them reluctant to write him a check. Maybe it was because he was so demanding, even arrogant. He demanded the title of Admiral, the rulership of all lands he might discover, and one-tenth of all things of value in those lands. He then demanded the sponsoring king make him a knight. Yes, he was demanding.

The merchants of Europe were excited over the possibility of a short water route to Asia. If they could shorten the journey, their profits would be multiplied enormously. Products from the Far East were greatly desired throughout Europe but difficult to get. When they could be purchased, they were highly-priced. Ginger, nutmeg, cinnamon, pepper, and clove were of major importance not so much to enhance the flavor of food but to disguise the taste of spoiled meat in a world without refrigeration. Wealthy Europeans paid huge prices for furs, dattes, oranges, and rice to plump their palates and stuff their stomachs. They were distrustful of silk and fine textiles to cover their bodies.

A short journey to the east by sailing west was a merchant's dream come true. Marco Polo had written about seeing great quantities of gold in Japan, and Columbus took that book on his first voyage. Gold was the answer to Spain's major problem after fighting a war for ten years. They needed vast sums of money. Columbus talked about finding gold, but the Spanish sovereigns had to wait for Cortez and others to produce prodigious amounts of gold from Peru, Mexico, and other places.

Columbus was a very religious man, so his diary proves, and he was committed to spreading Catholicism everywhere, although he became less religious as gold, spices, and fame increased. King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, Spanish sovereigns, agreed to finance his journey, and they were pleased with his spirituality. In a letter from the New World to Isabella, he wrote, "I think they [Indians] can very easily be made Christians, for they seem to have no religion, if it pleases our Lord, I will take six of them to Your Highnesses when I depart, in order that they may learn our language."

Ferdinand and Isabella were very religious (patriarchal), and they were determined to spread Catholicism and persecute Islam and Jews. In fact, all Jews (Spain's bankers) were expelled from Spain on the day Columbus sailed west. Of course, all the loans made to the king and queen and other Spaniards were canceled.

Isabella was the decision-maker (an early feminist) and loved her husband, although it was a political marriage. Ferdinand was unfaithful to her and fathered at least two children by mistresses. Immediately after her death, he married a very young, very pretty French girl generating much criticism although he was the king and took high as philogog.

The queen decided to fund Christopher Columbus's voyages leading to the discovery of the New World; she also supported the Pope in the brutal Spanish Inquisition that continued 360 years after she died. That means she made the best decision and maybe the worst decision ever made by a sovereign.

Columbus was now plying the ocean, sailing farther from the coast than any other man. He was going to make everyone happy except some natives.

None of his sailors had been more than 300 miles from land; now they were 3,000 miles away, and they started to be mutinous until they sighted land on October 12, 1492. It was one of the Bahamian Islands that Columbus named San Salvador. He thought he had found India, and as friendly natives approached, he called them Indians. He decided to take six of them back to Spain without thinking they might not want to go.

Boarding his ship, Columbus sailed to Cuba, thinking he had found China. On landing, no one greeted him except an old dog that paid no attention to him and his men. As always, he planted a cross in the sand "as a token of Jesus Christ, our Lord, and in honor of the Christian faith."

He still had not found the gleaming cities of gold that he was looking for, and that failure would prove embarrassing when he arrived home. He finally found gold on the island of Haiti and took the king and queen a chest full. He left a crew of men to supervise the panning for gold since Isabella and Ferdinand were expecting an inexhaustible supply.

With his gold, Indians, parrots, peacocks, etc., he set sail seaward and home. On a calm July day in 1493, Columbus was led by an honor guard toward the winter palace in Barcelona to report to the king and queen. The crowds grew ever larger as he approached the palace. Beautiful serenades from towers from upper balconies as the people shouted, "The Admiral! The Admiral!" Shops closed, and church bells rang throughout the city in his honor.

The Admiral made his way to the magnificent throne room and was greeted by Ferdinand and Isabella as "Admiral of the Ocean Sea and Viceroy of the Indies." The royal couple rose to meet him as he approached the throne, an unusual honor. Additional honor came to him as he was invited to sit beside the royal couple.

The court listened in silent reverence as Columbus told of his difficult journey, fear of ending, and the excitement on sighting land. He then presented the court with fruits, parrots, and six dark-skinned natives. When he finally opened the chest of gold, the king and queen got on their knees, followed by everyone in the court, and wept and sang, "Oh Lord, in thee have I trusted, let me ever be confounded."

What they were thinking was, we can now pay some of our bills. The Pope had given the king and queen control over "the lands in the Americas." However, it was not the popes to give. The secretaries and the Pope had a quiet pro quo agreement—you scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours. It worked; the Pope grew from the income from the New World discoveries since they had supported his horrendous inquisition years earlier.

Columbus could now have anything he wanted and what he wanted was a fleet of ships to colonize the islands. He had lost or forgotten most of the high idealism he had at the beginning of his adventure. He was too much impressed with himself and overly concerned with the results of success: possessions, power, and position.

The discovery of limited gold in Haiti had salvaged his first trip, but the successive voyages were disasters taking many lives, ships, and reputations of famous men. The supporters of his second journey were not thrilled with him spiritualizing his trip and talking about planting a cross on each island. They were interested in products, profits, and prestige.

The mighty Admiral's reputation was tarnished, and his merchandise had rotted. His virtues were not as impressive; his vice were magnified; his victory was limited to his first trip.

Whatever his failures and they were many, Columbus was the first man who was willing to risk his life to prove a theory and had discovered what would become the greatest civilization that has ever blossomed mankind—America.

He should be honored for that, not praised, criticized, and condemned by lesser men.
